Chamberlain Asks Proof

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 31.—Prime Minister Chamberlain today demanded that Europe's dictators produce "concrete evidence" of their "desire for peace" before "we can enter on the final settlement" of the European situation.

Willingness to disarm or limit armaments, Chamberlain said, would be proof of the dictators' peaceful intentions. He added Britain was ready to contribute to a general solution.

Asks "Credit Evidence"

Addressing Commons just one day after Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Reichstag speech, Chamberlain, commenting on the expressed peace desires of both the Fuehrer and Premier Mussolini, declared with emphasis:

"What we want to see is not only words which indicate a desire for peace, but, before we can enter on the final settlement, we shall want to see concrete evidence in a willingness, let us say, to enter into arrangements if not for disarmament at any rate for a limitation of armaments."

At conclusion of the foreign affairs debate a motion for adjournment—in effect a test vote on the prime minister's policy of appeasement in Europe and nonintervention in Spain—was carried by the government by a vote of 258 to 183.

While Chamberlain spoke of Britain's willingness to limit arms, he mentioned at the same time "enormous additions" to Britain's own defensive strength.

Answers His Critics

He answered critics of British rearmament progress by declaring "we are beginning now to see the results of our preparations on all sides."

Some observers saw this also as a sign he believed Britain's growing strength had influenced the German Fuehrer's speech last night.

Chamberlain was conciliatory and yet firm. It would be useless, he said, to start new discussions until confidence was restored.

Clinging to the main objective of his appeasement policy, which he said was steadily succeeding, the

Help France Arm, Plea Of Roosevelt

U. S. Must Aid Other Democracies, Avoid Alliances, He Tells Military Affairs Group

President Roosevelt yesterday told the Senate Military Affairs Committee that the United States must assist Great Britain and France to arm against the growing aggressive might of the totalitarian powers, as a means of preserving world peace.

Calling the group to the White House after hearings on the Administration's half-billion-dollar defense program had been turned into an investigation of the Government's part in French efforts to buy planes in the United States, the President is said to have given a frank discussion of American foreign policy and to have declared the United States must assist the democracies without, however, involving this Nation in any alliance.

Members of the committee were sworn to secrecy as to what took place in the President's office, but later it was said that the President took full responsibility for the proposed sale of 600 latest type planes to France and chided them for wasting time in investigating a perfectly proper procedure instead of expediting the national defense program.

Sworn to Secrecy

Declaring the sale of airplanes to Great Britain and France would aid employment and assist the United States to put the industry on mass production necessary to the country's own air program, the President assured the committee no secrets were divulged to the French aviation mission, and that arrangements for the sale did not include any grant of credits to France.

Meanwhile a high War Department official declared the department favored sale of military planes to France and Great Britain as long as experimental equipment was not divulged. All secret equipment had been taken from the Douglas attack bomber which crashed while being demonstrated for the French air mission, he stated. The official denied reports from the Senate Military Committee that the War Department had been first approached on the French deal and had turned it down, whereupon the President had overruled them. It was stated the War Department objected only to the fact other departments of the Government had gone to manufacturers which make planes for the Army and attempted to arrange the sale without consulting the War Department.

Army Consent Given

Following a conference at the White House January 16, attended by officials of the Treasury, War and Navy Departments, it was said, Army consent was given.

Other developments yesterday in the national defense situation included:

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison told the House Naval Committee with regard to the fortification of Guam, that the $5,000,000 asked now for harbor improvement and shore aviation facilities can be considered as "a separate and distinct development which is an entity in itself," use-

Quit at Once, President Tells Manton

Accepts Judge's Resignation as Quiz On 'Loans' Begins; Dewey May Act

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt yesterday accepted in crisp words the resignation of Judge Martin T. Manton, of the Circuit Court of Appeals in New York, who had been charged with accepting loans of more than $400,000 from litigants before his court.

Not only did the President make the resignation effective next Tuesday, but he told the jurist he was to sit in no more cases in the meantime.

While the resignation blocked an investigation by the House Judiciary Committee here looking to possible impeachment proceedings, United States Attorney Gregory F. Noonan began a formal inquiry before a Federal grand jury at New York to determine whether any criminal law had been violated "by anyone" in cases heard by Judge Manton.

Inquiry Under Way

In addition, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, at New York, who detailed the charges against the jurist in a letter to Chairman Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Judiciary Committee, last week, said he is considering "a possible criminal prosecution under the income tax laws of the State." At the same time Commissioner Sanford E. Bates, of the State tax department's investigation bureau, disclosed that he had turned over to the district attorney personal State income tax returns of Judge Manton.

Noonan said Manton would be invited to appear before the Federal grand jury "later after evidence has been presented."

As President Roosevelt made public at his press conference the correspondence between him and Judge Manton, he discussed with reporters the possibility of enacting laws that would restrict judges as well as other officeholders from benefiting from private business holdings.

Judge Manton's Letter

The letter from Judge Manton, dated January 30, and received about 3 p. m. yesterday, said:

"I hereby tender my resignation as United States Circuit Judge for the Second Judicial Circuit, to take effect at your pleasure and not later than March 1 next, at which time I will have been able to finish the business now in my hands."

The President's immediate reply said:

"I have received your resignation as United States Circuit Judge for the Second Judicial Circuit, and I hereby accept it to take effect on Tuesday, February 7. This will give you opportunity to dispose of such pending matters as the public interest requires, but this means, of course, that you will no longer sit on cases before the court."

When asked whether a judge, upon ascending the bench should be required to divest himself of outside interests, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized the difficulties in the way of drafting a law that would cover

Civil Service to Enroll 45,000 Today; 5,000 Exempted by Roosevelt

New Order Bars Technicians; Congress Motion Bans WPA Pay in Merit System

President Roosevelt's executive order of June 24 last, blanketing under civil service higher-bracket and emergency Government employes, was altered drastically, on the eve of its effective date yesterday, by the following developments:

1. Announcement by the President of a second executive order exempting lawyers, G-men, scientists, economists, administrators and other technicians from civil service until a satisfactory plan can be worked out extending the merit system to these groups.

2. Appointment by the President of a special committee, headed by Justice Stanley Reed of the United States Supreme Court, to devise such a plan.

3. The action of the House and Senate conference committee on the $725,000,000 deficiency relief resolution prohibiting use of relief funds to pay salaries of persons blanketed into civil service by Presidential executive order.

New Order Exempts 5,000

The new executive order, the President said, will affect less than 10 per cent of those who were to be brought under civil service by the original order. About 5,000 persons, in consequence, will be temporarily exempted from civil service, he explained.

Since the June 24 order goes into effect today, all except the small group temporarily exempted are eligible for civil service, provided they are properly certified as satisfactory and pass the required civil service examinations. Persons paid out of relief funds, however, stand a chance of being dropped from the pay roll if they follow this course.

In order to clear up this difficulty, it was learned, the President probably will issue, when the deficiency relief resolution becomes law, a third executive order exempting from civil service all persons paid out of relief funds.

Officials explained that this would definitely remove any possibility of such persons being dropped from the pay roll.

Favors Civil Service in Relief

President Roosevelt made plain he favored extension of civil service to those paid out of relief funds as well as the others.

Considerable uncertainty prevails as to how many persons are affected by the action of the conference committee in adopting the broader Senate provision relating to civil service. The President said 45,000 persons, over and above those temporarily exempted, would become eligible today for civil service. An additional 30,000, he said, are paid out of relief funds.

Conference committee members, on the other hand, estimated that about 50,000 persons are paid out of relief funds, and thus will be affected by the deficiency resolution ban.

Frankfurter on Committee

Administration experts said the number thus exempted from civil service will constitute the bulk of the 80,000 covered by the original order. As a result, they explained, most of the emergency employes will come under the ban. Only a comparatively small number, consisting chiefly of older employes, they said, can enter civil service without running the risk of being dropped from the pay roll.

Besides Reed, the committee named to work out a plan for extension of the merit system to specialized groups consists of the following: Justice Felix Frankfurter, of the United States Supreme Court; Attorney General Frank Murphy; William H. McReynolds, adminis-

Court Orders Giannini to Let SEC See Books

Denies Bank of America Injunction Against Subpena of Records

The right of the Securities and Exchange Commission to make a public investigation of the financial condition of the Bank of America was upheld by Justice O'Donoghue, in District Court yesterday.

The justice held that the inquiry is part of the commission's function of protecting the stock-buying public, but he commented that his decision did not mean the SEC could "run wild" and harass business with "fishing expeditions."

Counsel for the bank announced it would appeal the decision.

L. M. Giannini, president of the bank, said last night that the decision would be pressed "to the very highest court in the United States." He lamented that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and SEC Chairman William O. Douglas were not called to court to explain what public interest the disclosures would serve.

He imputed the bank's resistance to solicitude for the Nation's banking system, declaring "we have nothing to hide."

The bank was ordered to produce records in connection with hearings on SEC charges that Transamerica Corporation, its heaviest stockholder, had made false and misleading reports on what its stock in the bank was worth.

January 16, the day the hearing opened, the bank sued to restrain the SEC from enforcing compliance with subpenas for its records. The bank contended only the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Reserve Board have the right to investigate its affairs and that Congress exempted national banks from investigation by other agencies.

William Stanley, arguing yesterday for the bank, told Justice O'Donoghue that if the SEC desired

Conferees Put Ban on Politics In Relief Only

Agree on WPA Bill With Slash and 'Emergency' Safeguards

By Robert C. Albright.

A House and Senate conference committee yesterday agreed on a $725,000,000 deficiency appropriation for relief with "emergency" safeguards, but modified the sweeping Senate ban on politics in Government and Federal and State agencies.

A far-reaching amendment prohibiting "any person" from soliciting political contributions from Government workers or State employes in agencies supported by Federal funds was narrowly restricted to apply only to workers drawing pay from relief funds.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, immediately announced plans to work jointly with Senate Administration leaders in drafting "permanent legislation" extending a rigid political ban for all time to everyone paid from Federal funds.

Hatch said his new bill will follow conferences with Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Chairman Sheppard of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, and Chairman George of the Senate Elections Committee. The permanent legislation when drawn will be referred to the elections committee.

The relief bill politics provisions were modified following discovery that the code embraced in the bill was so broad it would virtually preclude $100-plate Jackson Day dinners financed largely in the past by Government employes as well as strike sharply at political machines in some States which have solicited contributions from State workers.

Even as revised, the conference draft of the relief bill erects stringent barriers against political use

Miss Perkins Calls Religion CommunistBar

Says Primary Duty of Church Is to Know People's Social Needs

The faithful practice of the principles of religion and constitutional democracy will be a sure defense against the principles of communism, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said last night.

In the same address, Miss Perkins said that a primary obligation of the church in relation to social work is to be currently informed of the social needs of the community. Acquaintance with these needs can come, most effectively through first hand experience in relation to them, particularly in community activities related to them.

Miss Perkins spoke at Foundry Methodist Church at the dinner climaxing the First Annual Church and Social Work Institute sponsored by the Social Welfare Department of the Washington Federation of Churches. About 200 local churches were represented, as well as social agencies and other organizations.

"The quite general ridicule of or active opposition to all religion by communistic literature violates the deepest convictions and sincere faith in God of American people," declared the labor executive.

"The concept of a dictatorship of the proletariat and the contempt for Christian ethics, concepts reiterated in communistic literature, are contrary to all my beliefs and all your beliefs, devoted as we al-

Storm Toll Mounts to 38 In 12 States

Fresh Blizzard Sweeps From West as Legions Attack Staggering Drifts

By the Associated Press.

A fresh snow storm swept across the West yesterday while legions of laborers attacked some of the deepest drifts in recent years in the North and East.

Even before the heavy fall in the Atlantic States had ceased, a storm approaching blizzard proportions whisked eastward from the Rocky Mountain area toward Midwestern districts already overburdened with snow.

The 12 States between Illinois and Maine beset by snow Monday and yesterday reported a total of 38 deaths.

The new storm was the worst of the winter in Utah. Snow reached a depth of 6 inches at Salt Lake City, 9 at Ogden and 18 at Logan, and fell also in Idaho, Nevada, Montana, Wyoming, North and South Dakota.

Meanwhile, six fatalities were recorded in upstate New York, where the snow ranged up to 18 inches.

Temperature Rise, Rain Forecast

Washington will be greeted this morning by 22-degree weather, the Weather Bureau forecast last night. Later temperature will rise slowly, with increasing cloudiness, the forecaster said. Rain is in store for tomorrow. The mercury was high at 40 degrees at 6 a. m. yesterday.

Policeman Quits Motorcycle to Nab Thief in Footrace

A motorcycle policeman last night captured an auto thief in a mile chase through Northwest Washington after the stolen new auto smashed into a fireplug.

Policeman Edward C. Comminger spotted a speeding auto at Florida avenue and Seventh street northwest. He gave chase. The fugitive's car ran into the fire plug at Marion and Sixth streets, and the speeder tried to run away, but Comminger caught up with him after a footrace around the block.

The arrested man confessed to having stolen the new auto only a few minutes earlier from a motor company at 2525 Sherman avenue northwest.

New Temblors And Severe Storms Afflict Chileans

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 31 (AP).—New earth tremors, unusual volcanic activity and electrical storms today struck fresh fear into the hearts of Chile's destitute thousands, the survivors of an earthquake last week which took perhaps 30,000 lives.

A quake of moderate intensity was felt last night at La Serena, 600 miles north of last week's disaster zone, and another of considerable intensity was felt at Chillan, virtually leveled last week.

The Llaima Volcano in the Chillan area and the Quizzapu Vilcano near Talca, were putting on minor displays of life, and the governor of Biobio Province reported that Antuco Volcano, had come to life after two centuries of inactivity.

Horse Crashes Admiral's Auto

A United States admiral, in his auto, and a runaway horse collided in Rock Creek parkway at the Massachusetts avenue underpass yesterday. Only the car suffered.

The animal ran into the auto of Rear Admiral H. G. Bowen, 2819 Woodley road northwest.

Right to Slap Wife Upheld

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—A man has the right to slap his wife, Judge Finnegan ruled today in denying a divorce to Mrs. Mary Kuhar, 21. And he added:

"If more wives were slapped there would be fewer divorces."

Federal Employes, Overtime Hit In Randolph Bill

A new plan to discourage executive departments from making Federal employes work overtime was proposed to Congress yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, member of the House Civil Service Committee.

The measure, sponsored by the American Federation of Government Employes, seeks to amend the classification act to increase the pay for night-time work by 10 per cent. The increase would apply to District employes also.

Randolph also introduced a bill to place the policemen at the National Zoo in the same category as the United States Park policemen with a salary scale equal to that of the Metropolitan Police Department.

First Lady Never Sits Down To Relax; Knits to Rest Eyes

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday answered one of the major questions posed by the New Deal.

From Maine to California, for six years they have been asking: "How does she do it?"

As the First Lady sees them, the answers are simple:

1. She breakfasts at 8:30, no matter how late she stayed up the night before. "You can't start a household late," she explained.

2. She never sits down "consciously to relax."

3. She takes no afternoon naps.

4. She has never had a "facial" and has a hair fix only once a week—at most.

5. She reads herself to sleep each night and has never been bothered by insomnia.

6. She knits to rest her eyes.

As to how much sleep she needs, she told her press conference it depends entirely on "how much there is to do."

The demand for attention to more things is as great as the suggestion for concentration, she said, giving the reaction to her recent discoveries at Gallinger Hospital as a point in evidence.

She said she has received many letters regarding the current WPA situation, but that she has advised that the communications go directly to Senators and Representatives.

Asked concerning the vogue for playing "The Star-Spangled Banner," Mrs. Roosevelt said she thought it should be saved for special occasions and not used too often.

5 Believed Dead As Ceiling Falls In Oklahoma Mine

Picher, Okla., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Five men were believed killed late today when a section of rock ceiling in the southern mine of the Dines Mining Co. collapsed. Three bodies were recovered.

Company officials said there was little likelihood that any of the men survived after tons of rock and dirt crashed into the mine 145 feet below the surface.

Rescue crews were attempting to drive an air pipe through the debris.

ABC Orders Arrest Of Liquor Dealers Without Licenses

More than 160 liquor licensees who failed to obtain new licenses before yesterday's deadline were sternly warned by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to cease liquor sales after last midnight or face immediate arrest.

Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, member of the board, said special agents and members of the police force were ordered to tour the city and arrest any dealer dispensing liquor without a license.

George Burns Fined $8,000 In Gem Smuggling Conspiracy

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 31.—The price radio comedian George Burns paid for two smuggled bracelets and a ring rose today when he was fined $8,000, given a suspended sentence of a year and a day, and placed on a year's probation.

The sentence resulted from Burns' plea of guilty to two indictments charging smuggling, although Federal authorities said he did not actually bring the jewels into the country.

Burns' friend, radio funnyman Jack Benny, has pleaded innocent to a similar indictment and will go on trial here February 14.

Burns must make personal reports about twice a month to a Federal probation officer. He must not be seen in the company of questionable characters nor frequent establishments and resorts of unsavory reputation during this time.

The Government placed the monetary cost of the baubles at $4,885. Burns already has paid $9,770 in penalties to customs authorities. In addition, he has made at least three round trips between Hollywood and New York, and of course on top of that are fees for his attorneys.

Burns has ten days in which to pay his fine. He had faced a possible maximum sentence of 18 years' imprisonment and fines totaling $45,000.

Leniency was granted on the ground that Burns had co-operated with the Government in a widespread investigation of smuggling.

JIMMY IN HOLLYWOOD

(An imaginary conversation between young Mr. Roosevelt and his new boss, Mr. Sam Goldwyn.)

SAM: Well, Jimmy, what kinda Washington movie would wow 'em?

JIMMY: How about a Senator for a hero and a beautiful lady lobbyist?

Col. Roosevelt ... private citizen

SAM: That's been underdone. They've had West Point and Annapolis and Congress . . . How about the whole Supreme Court for our hero?

* * * *

JIMMY: Remember I'm just a private citizen . . . Maybe Justices McReynolds and Black would dissent.

SAM: In the big scene we could have the whole Court deliver a minority opinion. Didn't your dad pack 'em in with the Court?

JIMMY: Better lay off the Court. They're a big headache.

SAM: (Delivers his punch line.) O. K., include the Court out . . . How about a Wages and Hours scenario? Realism, with Paul Muni. The hero works longer hours and gets a raise in wages.

JIMMY: That's not the way the law reads.

SAM: Oh, a romantic law, uh? We could make it in technicolor.

"—a nine-man minority"

JIMMY: How about a farm picture? Young fellow's in love with the girl on the next farm, the champion 4-H pie-maker. But short of dough.

SAM: Then he goes into the insurance business, huh?

JIMMY: No. He's plowing late one night and suddenly he solves the farm problem.

SAM: Then he gets elected Secretary of Agriculture? Great! We do a fadeout as he's reducing the farm surplus to the biggest figure in history.

JIM: Not bad. But could you include me out also.

SAM: Couldn't we have a scene where he explains his system to the Diplomatic Corps? We could borrow the whole Diplomatic Corps for a coupla days. In costume. We'd pay for the cleaning.

MEMO TO JIM FARLEY: Tommy Corcoran has just left for his annual physical checkup and a two-week rest. He'll be somewhere in the great unpurged Free State of Maryland, but I agreed not to reveal his phone number. Maybe he'll ski a little, too.

I wonder if we'll notice a lull.

SAM: We could shoot part of it on the front portico, with the hero showing 'em how to plow under the farm problem on the White House lawn with a tractor.

SAM: Well, what can you solve it with, with an adding machine?

JIM: That's been tried. Maybe I could get John Hamilton to play the farmer for you.

SAM: Did I hire you as a Democrat or as a Republican? Say, Jimmy, I got a favor to ask you.

"—a short routine"

JIM: (suspiciously) What's that? Maybe we could lend you a couple of airplane carriers or the Vice President?

SAM: Oh, no, not him. (Casually) I hear the King and Queen are paying your Dad and Mother a quick visit this summer.

SAM: Well, could you fix it up to sneak in a few cameras and some sound equipment and get them to go through a short skit? We could build a picture around it later, and maybe they could gradually come out to Hollywood for retakes.

JIM: But you can't expect 'em to face cameras without any make-up.

SAM: Oh, you get them to wear their crowns and some ermine robes.

JIM: Anything special you want them to say? Do they need a rehearsal?

SAM: Oh, no, just get them to say something spontaneous like "England expects every American to do his duty," or "May we borrow your Navy sometime?" or "Us democracies gotta stick together" or "Kansas expects every Englishman to do his duty."

JIM: Certainly, certainly. And do you want to ask 'em if Princess Lilybet can play Scarlett O'Hara when she grows up? Don't you realize how much sales resistance these kings have? I thought I came out here to relax from Washington!

Move to Revive Reorganization Unit Up Today

House Rules Action First Step to Enact Controversial Bill

A resolution reviving the special nine-man reorganization committee to handle the President's reorganization program yesterday was given right of way by the House Rules Committee and will be called up in the House today.

It was the first move toward enactment of the controversial reorganization bill, placed second only to national defense on the President's legislative agenda.

As the Rules Committee moved to restore the old committee headed by Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, told the group he virtually has completed a measure that should provide a "common meeting ground" for both Democrats and Republicans.

Bill Not Yet Written

Warren, Administration strategist on the special committee, recently disclosed he was working to eliminate "discordant elements" in the program.

It was persistently reported that the Warren measure will drop controversial provisions for a single civil service administrator and leave powers of the Comptroller General virtually untouched.

Warren said his bill has not yet been reduced to writing. These were two of the most controversial points in the bill which last session was pigeonholed by the House. Another point on which friction has persisted—power for the President to issue reorganization orders without offsetting Congressional authority—reportedly figures in current negotiations.

Approval Today Likely

The Cochran resolution extending life of the reorganization committee apparently is heading for Honse approval today following one hour of debate.

When the resolution is approved, three vacancies on the group must be filled by Speaker Bankhead—posts formerly held by James M. Mead, of New York, since elected to the Senate; Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, now a member of the Court of Appeals for the District, and Representative Kniffen, of Ohio, defeated in the last election.

Former members who will be reappointed include Cochran, Warren, Beam of Illinois, and Robinson, of Utah (Democrats), and Taber, of New York, and Gifford, of Massachusetts (Republicans). Cochran is expected to call a meeting of his revived committee later this week.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 31.—British public opinion handed President Roosevelt a birthday bouquet today.

GALLUP.

In a cross-section survey conducted by the British Institute of Public Opinion which the London News Chronicle will publish tomorrow, the overwhelming majority of British voters interviewed said they thought the "world would benefit" if President Roosevelt were elected for a third term.

What Britishers think of President Roosevelt makes scant difference on election day, of course, and the President has not indicated that he is thinking of seeking a third term.

But the survey is interesting as probably the first test of his popularity outside the United States.

American opinion has been sharply opposed to a third term for Roosevelt, according to surveys of the American Institute of Public Opinion, of which Dr. George Gallup is director.

Here is the actual vote in the survey which the Institute's British affiliate has just conducted, however:

Gov. Price to Aid Roberts, Says Flannagan; Southwestern Traffic Men Oppose Amlie

By the Associated Press.

Representative Flannagan (Democrat), of Virginia, said yesterday the Governor and two former Governors of Virginia would support, before the Senate Judiciary Committee today the nomination of Floyd H. Roberts to be judge of Virginia's western district.

ROBERTS

The committee called the public hearing after Senators Byrd and Glass termed the nomination "personally offensive" to them.

Roberts is here to attend the hearing and Flannagan said witnesses favorable to him would include Gov. James H. Price, former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle and former Gov. Westmoreland Davis.

Glass declined advance comment on any statement he might make to the committee.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 31.—The Southwestern Industrial Traffic League adopted a resolution today asking the Senate to reject the appointment of Thomas R. Amlie as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The opposition was explained by Frank A. Leffingwell, of Dallas, secretary, to be due to "the simple fact that he isn't qualified."

Atlanta, Jan. 31.—Resignation of Scott Candler, a friend of Senator Walter F. George, as acting manager of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's Atlanta agency was announced by the RFC today.

Backing George in his successful campaign for renomination over a New Deal "purge" attempt in Georgia's 1938 Democratic primary campaign, Candler had long figured in the State patronage speculation.

The RFC said Candler's resignation was submitted so he would be eligible for a county position he is seeking in an election, and became effective yesterday. W. A. Chadwell was named acting manager.

Representative Larrabee (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the House Committee on Education, introduced for the committee yesterday a bill to provide new Federal grants up to $205,000,000 annually for educational purposes.

Larrabee said "we intend to give thorough consideration" to proposals of the President's Advisory Committee on Education on the basis of which the bill was drafted.

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee will leave for Florida tomorrow to inspect the route of the proposed Florida Ship Canal.

H. H. Buckman, consulting engineer for the Canal Authority, said it would be "strictly a business trip." He said 15 or 20 committee members would be in the party, there would be no entertainment and expenses would be paid by the Canal Authority, created by the Florida Legislature.

Attention to the canal was revived two weeks ago when President Roosevelt wrote to House and Senate committees urging its completion.

International Paper to Sell Subsidiaries

Utility First to Comply With 'Death Sentence' Proviso of Holding Act

The International Paper & Power Co., at a meeting yesterday of its board of directors in Boston, arranged to dispose of its $500,000,000 of utility properties under a plan for compliance with the 1935 utility holding company act worked out in co-operation with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Chairman William O. Douglas, of the SEC, pointed to the arrangement as a pattern to be followed by other companies in meeting requirements of the so-called "death sentence" provisions of the act. He described the company's action as of "tremendous significance."

Transfers Properties

The company agreed to transfer the utility properties in the system to a liquidating trust which will dispose of the properties in an orderly manner over a period of time. The result is to make the utility holding company act inapplicable to the two top companies in the system—International Paper and Power, and its subsidiary, the International Paper Co.

International Hydro-Electric System, the third company in the system, which has applied for exemption from the act, will withdraw its application and register under the act. The liquidating trust also will register.

Two Years to Liquidate

The liquidating trust will have two years in which to dispose of the properties.

International Hydro-Electric will dissolve a voting trust and reacquire 88 per cent of the voting stock in the New England Power Association. The SEC will start hearings on the plan Friday.

Wallace and Senator To Discuss Cotton Glut

Southern Democratic Senators yesterday invited Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to meet with them today to map plans for disposing of the record 14,000,000-bale cotton surplus and means for bettering crop prices.

The Southern bloc was unable to agree on a definite plan for meeting the surplus problem. Chairman Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, has already proposed a five-point legislative program designed to permit withdrawal of cotton held under Government loans and to guarantee better prices to growers.

Fidelity Held Solvent, Suit Dismissed

Investment Firm Will Submit Advertising to SEC Hereafter

By the Associated Press.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 31.—Federal Judge William E. Baker dismissed today a receivership petition filed against the Fidelity Investment Association.

The court confirmed a special master's report which declared the Nation-wide investment loan concern was solvent and recommended dismissal of the petition in which nine Pennsylvania contract holders charged the company "recklessly, carelessly and wrongfully" managed its accounts.

In approving the report, Judge Baker also dismissed an exception by Edward Lamb, attorney for an intervenor, who had objected to the 56-page report on the grounds that solvency had been determined by the "sound value theory" rather than the "market value" of the association's "underlying securities."

The receivership petition was filed December 19 after the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission obtained an injunction enjoining Fidelity from what the SEC contended were fraudulent practices. The company agreed to the injunction but denied the practices were fraudulent.

On January 16 Judge Baker appointed Charles P. Mead, of Wheeling, as special master to act as "arbiter" of a committee composed of opposing counsel and independent auditors to investigate the firm's finances.

Fidelity Counsel A. V. Wood said the association was now "at liberty" to resume sale of contracts but did not intend to do so until all advertising matter has been approved by the securities commission.

Warden Fired After Arrest of 2 Md. 'Trusties'

House of Correction Chauffeur and 'Pupil' Picked Up in Baltimore

Warden Walter E. Quenstedt of the Maryland House of Correction at Jessups, Md., near Laurel, was dismissed yesterday by the State board of welfare following arrest of two "trusties" in Baltimore.

Reasons for the dismissal were not given, but Charles Butler, director of the welfare board, said it was "for the good of the service."

The action came after an all-day investigation into the activities and arrest of the "trusties" Monday night and the subsequent questioning of them as to their absence from the House of Correction.

The welfare board held a special session and heard a number of witnesses before announcing the ouster.

Police identified the arrested men as Thomas J. Linton, who was serving a term for bank robbery, and William A. Parker, convicted in a fraud case. Both are from Baltimore.

Explaining the absence of the two prisoners, Warden Quenstedt said, Parker is the House of Correction's regular chauffeur and is due to be released in a few weeks. Lintop, he said, is scheduled to promotion to Parker's job and was with Parker to learn his new duties.

Monday night, the warden added, he sent the two men into Baltimore to get his automobile in a repair shop there. They were driving another car, which had been loaned to him by the motor company.

Police would not reveal why they had picked up the trusties.

'Sea Serpent' Tanker Discharges Oil Cargo Here

A modern sea serpent docked in Washington yesterday to discharge its cargo of 11,000 barrels of oil—the first such consignment ever brought directly here from the Texas wells.

The monster is the revolutionary tanker, Dolomite 4, which defies most of the hoary traditions of ship design.

Steered by a short lever, like that used by a streetcar motorman, the vessel has a machine-moved rudder.

When launched, the Dolomite 4 did not "go down the ways." Water, instead, was syphoned into the unused spur of the Erie Canal, near Rochester, N. Y., where the 301-foot vessel was built.

Weinberg's Story of Hines Is Given Jury

Testimony Presented By Suicide in First Trial Admitted by Court

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 31.—With testimony of gangster George Weinberg, a witness who killed himself Sunday, the State sought again today to show that Tammany District Leader James J. Hines afforded hired political protection to the vast Dutch Schultz policy racket.

Like an accusation from the grave, the story Weinberg told in Hines' first trial was told again. The words of Weinberg were read by a young assistant prosecutor, Herman McCarthy.

In a half-spectral re-enactment, McCarthy sat in the witness box where Weinberg had sat, while another assistant, Frank Hogan, asked the questions that District Attorney Dewey had asked before.

Hines' first trial ended last fall in a mistrial. He is charged with conspiracy in the operation of a lottery.

Weinberg shot himself while in the custody of the district attorney, and this fact, after much deliberation, was announced to the jury by Judge Charles C. Nott, jr.

". . . I cannot too strongly impress upon your minds," the court said, "that the cause is unknown and that you are not to indulge in speculation as to the cause . . .

"You should listen to the testimony," he added, "as though it were being given by the late witness."

Weinberg's evidence provided a direct link for the prosecution's claim that Hines "intimidated, influenced or bribed" certain judicial officials to dismiss case against lottery operators.

Lloyd Paul Stryker, attorney for Hines, argued vainly that Weinberg's dead-man testimony was not now admissible.

Senators Submit Labor Act Plans To U. S. Agencies

Thomas said the group had referred nine amendments, backed by the American Federation of Labor and introduced by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, to the Labor Department and National Labor Board.

ways have been to the democratic principles of our Constitution with the protection of individual liberties, freedom of religious worship and freedom of speech guaranteed to us in the Bill of Rights.

"I have too much respect for the American people, both native and foreign born, to fear that they will accept the principles of communism, but a sure defense would be a faithful practice by all of us of the principles of religion and the principles of constitutional democracy. Communism has no place in American life."

Miss Perkins, whose message followed a discussion by church, social welfare and civic leaders on better co-operation between religious and social agencies, said that the church can aid in interpreting programs devised to meet the social needs. For example, she pointed out, it may be helpful in educating public opinion in relation to local application of national social improvement programs.

The Rev. John L. Mixon, director of the social welfare department of the Federation of Churches, made a plea for spiritually motivated social work. He said the rapid growth of public agencies in recent years has tended to widen the gap between religious and social agencies.

At the dinner were the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of the cathedral, who introduced Miss Pergins; Dr. Oliver J. Hart, chairman of the final gathering; Dr. Horace E. Cromer, president of the Federation of Churches, and others.

Organizing the welfare program of the local churches was discussed in all the day's sessions. The Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown, described the scope of the parish program, and Dr. J. Hillman Hollister outlined the project of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Orris G. Robinson, pastor of the Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, conducted the afternoon meeting.

Other speakers were Elwood Street, director of public welfare; Herbert Willett, director of the Community Chest; Frances Dysinger, of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society; Mrs. Margaret Ford, of the Travelers' Aid Society; Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive director of the Council of Social Agencies, and others.

Dr. W. L. Darby recommended more widespread use of the Social Service Exchange.

prime minister also echoed Hitler's own words last night that statesmen should "devote themselves for a time to improving the conditions of their own people."

The prime minister spoke three times—twice in answer to questions on his Rome visit and Hitler's speech, and finally in a foreign affairs debate after the Labor leader, Clement Attlee, had attacked Britain's refusal to help the hard-pressed Spanish government in the civil war.

Chamberlain, declaring Britain's prestige never was higher or her friendship more eagerly desired, said, however, that "after this long period of uncertainty and anxiety in Europe confidence is not easily or quickly established."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal opposition, in an attack on nonintervention, said, "The Rome-Berlin axis is now to be seen across the map of Europe, a geographical and strategical reality dividing west Europe and east Europe, and Russia is alienated.

Cites U. S. Press

"The prime minister says our prestige is high. . . . I say that he can not have read the United States newspapers."

Brig. Gen. Sir Henry Page Croft retorted that Sinclair "even tried to make enmity between this country and the United States by suggesting that American opinion is against us."

President Roosevelt, he added, was "thinking along the same lines as we are."

Thousands of demonstrators, shouting, "We want arms for Spain," threw traffic in Piccadilly Circus into a snarl tonight.

Mounted police dispersed the crowd. More than 30 were arrested.

The group went into Piccadilly after about 2,000 had staged a similar demonstration outside the House of Commons, shouting, "Let Chamberlain come out here" and "We demand arms for Spain."

Rome, Jan. 31.—Twenty thousand blackshirt troops encamped in Rome tonight in expectation of a fighting speech tomorrow from Premier Mussolini in a celebration of the founding of the Fascist militia 16 years ago.

Today he and Reichsfuehrer Hitler exchanged telegrams reaffirming Italian-German friendship and a statement from official quarters declared Hitler's Reichstag speech pledging support if Italy were attacked showed the "unshakability of bonds between Italy and Germany."

Excerpts From Chamberlain's Reply to Critics

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 31.—Following are excerpts from Prime Minister Chamberlain's declarations in the House of Commons today:

"The leader of the opposition in his observations has confined himself to a single topic of Spain, varied only by a few acid comments on the visit to Rome from which I derived the impression that he was against it.

"As regards Spain, Mr. Attlee touched on two aspects of the conflict there. One of them was concerned with a matter of general policy. On that, of course, it is impossible to agree with him. On the other aspect, which I may call the humanitarian aspect, there is no difference between him and us.

"No one can read the account of the pitiful procession of wounded men, old men, women and children, some of them mutilated, struggling up the mountains which divide France from Spain, in conditions of bitter hardship . . . without feeling what a terrible thing war is even in its secondary effects . . .

"I understand the French government have arranged with the Spanish government for an area near the frontier where refugees can be concentrated and, if they can obtain assurances from the Spanish government that this area will not be used for (war) purposes, I hope it will be possible to obtain similar assurances from Gen. Franco.

"We have already made a contribution to the international commission for the assistance of child refugees in Spain. We have paid 20,000 sterling (about $93,400) to the commission and we have put a further 20,000 sterling at their disposal and when the need arises I have no doubt we shall be ready to do more.

"A representative of the commission is going to Catalonia to try to arrange with the Spanish government for safety zones for women, children and old people and I hope similar assurances may be available from both sides . . .

"The government have already addressed to Gen. Franco an appeal to exercise all possible humanity in the circumstances which prevail in Catalonia . . .

Challenges Opposition

"Intervention in Spain had taken place before the setting up of the nonintervention committee and I think is a fact sometimes forgotten by members opposite . . .

"We made it clear from the beginning that our fear was that if the policy of intervention was continued and increased, sooner or later it was bound to lead to an extension of the conflict and it has been our aim to prevent that extension.

"I am quite satisfied that if our policy was right, as I believe it to have been right all along, it certainly is not now the moment to change it . . .

"I think we are entitled to ask . . . what, in the same contingencies, would the opposition do? . . .

" . . . I do not consider the situation in Spain is at this moment a menace to the peace of Europe, but most emphatically I do consider the abandonment of nonintervention would be a menace and if intervention took place on any considerable scale the Spanish situation would be a menace.

"The leader of the opposition has not brought forward any evidence to show there is intervention on a great scale, unless he means, what of course we all know, that Italian troops are fighting and Italian material is being used in the course of the conflict. Intervention took place before the nonintervention committee was set up . . .

"The reason why we refused to grant belligerent rights to Gen. Franco was on the ground this was not a civil war merely but the matter was complicated by the intervention of foreign powers on one side or the other . . .

"Mr. Attlee has devoted some time to painting a picture of the threat to British and French interests if Gen. Franco won a victory. That is based upon the assumption that after the victory Italy or Germany, or both, would be found in possession of Spanish territory . . .

"What Mr. Attlee is saying is 'I do not believe in the assurances given by Signor Mussolini and Herr Hitler.' I should think the worst way in which to insure that a man who had given his word would keep it would be to tell him 'I do not believe a word you say and I will base all my actions on the assumption you are not telling the truth.'

". . . Only the other day when we were in Rome we received fresh and repeated assurances from Signor Mussolini and Count Ciano confirming what they had already told us—that they had nothing to seek from Spain after the war was over.

"Of course I had similar assurances from Herr Hitler . . . .

". . . The opposition . . . leave out of account all suggestion that we have vast resources, although everybody knows it, which probably if we were ever engaged in a life and death struggle would insure us victory in the end.

"They take no account either of the alliances and friendships which we have with other countries. . . .

"It is not true the great efforts which we have made in rearmament have been offset by other considerations.

Says Prestige Is High

"It is true, of course, that the amount of preparation we had to do before we could make substantial and visible progress in rearmament was enormous. . . .

". . . We are beginning now to see the results of the long preparation and I think the public is realizing that our efforts have resulted in an enormous and ever more rapidly increasing addition to our defensive strength.

"As to our prestige abroad, it has never stood higher than it does today.

"There never was a time when our friendship was more generally desired and sought by other countries. . . .

". . . It (Hitler's Reichstag address) was a long speech.

"It touched a great many topics and covered a wide field.

"I do not pretend I have had time to examine with care every phrase in it, but I can say this:

"I very definitely got the impression it was not the speech of a man who was preparing to throw Europe into another crisis. It seemed to me there were many passages in the speech which indicated the necessity of peace for Germany as well as for other countries.

"We all have our domestic problems, our economic or financial problems, problems of unemployment in one country and other problems in other countries. None of us could be unsympathetic to the idea that the statesmen of the various countries should devote themselves for a time to the improvement of the conditions of their own people.

"I ventured to say in the speech to which Mr. Attlee referred that in my view there were no questions arising between nations however serious that could not be settled by conversation or discussed around a table. I repeat that now.

"I only add this qualification to it: It is no use to embark on discussions with a view to general settlement of differences, satisfaction of aspirations and removal of grievances unless those who undertake them are convinced that those who sit around the table want a peaceful settlement and have no sinister ideas at the back of their minds.

"After this long period of uncertainty and anxiety in Europe confidence is not easily or quickly established

"I say, therefore, that what we want to see is not only words which indicate a desire for peace, but, before we can enter upon that final settlement, we shall want to see concrete evidence of a willingness, let us say, to enter into arrangements, if not for disarmament, at any rate for a limitation of armament.

"If when that time comes we can find a spirit corresponding to our own elsewhere, then I know this country would not be unsympathetic and we should be ready to make our contribution to the general appeasement of Europe."

(The prime minister also made a separate statement reporting on his visit to Rome January 11 to 14, from which the following excerpts are taken:)

". . . Signor Mussolini emphasized that when the Spanish conflict was over, Italy would have nothing to ask from Spain, and in further discussions with foreign secretary on this point, Count Ciano spontaneously reaffirmed the assurance already given to his majesty's government that Italy had no territorial ambitions as regards any portion of Spain.

"Signor Mussolini did not hesitate to express the view that belligerent rights should immediately be granted to Gen. Franco, but he reiterated his willingness to stand by the British plan which had been adopted by the nonintervention committee.

"With regard to the Jewish problem it was clear that Signor Mussolini felt the matter was an international one which could not be solved by any one state alone and which must be treated on broad lines."

France Guards Border Against SpanishRetreat

Speeds Refugee Entry To Avoid Stampede: Franco Troops Advance

By the Associated Press.

Perpignan, France, Jan. 31.—Heavy reinforcements of French troops poured into the frontier region opposite Catalonia tonight to barricade France against a possible mass retreat of the Spanish government army.

The reinforcements included several cavalry and motorized units.

Minister of Interior Sarraut ordered the entry of Spain's civilian refugees into France to be speeded lest they be caught in the threatened stampede.

A Perpignan newspaper said 50,000 soldiers were likely to be sent to guard the border, but the foreign office in Paris said the figure seemed "high."

Knee deep in heavy snow in the Pyrenees, a column of 10,000 loyalist troops tried to hold the insurgents south of Seo de Urgel, 34 miles west of Puigcerda, along the French border.

Their attackers, well-trained Navarrese mountain troops, fought their way up the Segre River gorge to the towns of Coll de Nargo, Gifols and Organa, and then stormed and captured Figols Peak, 10 miles south of Seo de Orgel.

Thousands of other government troops hastily threw together barricades for a new defense line across the highway between Seo de Urgel and Puigcerda, one of the three main highway exits into France left in government hands, and the main railway connection between France and government Catalonia.

High in their tiny mountain republic, Andorrans excitedly followed reports of the battle nearby. If Seo de Urgel falls, Andorra's only road connection with Spain will be in insurgent hands.

Fancy Cocktails Out of Style, State Liquor Dealers Declare

The "Horse's Neck" is slowly being given back to the horse, and the Side-Car" to the motorcycle, for fancy cocktails are passing out of style. That was the consensus among the delegates to the National Council of State Liquor Dealers Council at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

These fancy drinks were just a "ritzy idea of our younger people," according to Neil F. Deighan, president of the New Jersey Licensed Beverage Association and chairman of the convention. Older folks drink "Old Fashioneds," to be sure—not unnaturally—and there is always a steady demand for "Manhattans" and "Martinis." the old standbys of the cocktail trade. But your true judge of liquor, your gentleman and scholar who takes his drinking in a proper sober spirit, sticks to good American rye, the delegates said.

The swinging-door didn't survive America's 14-year legal drought, the delegates observed. Drinking moved to the parlor and underwent feminine influences, in the direction of "good taste and respectability."

There is one big headache for the liquor dealers these days, among their many lesser ones: Why must the movies always advertise the foreign product, Scotch? America, they say, likes "bourbon" better and "rye" a whole lot better. Something must be done about it, they assert, and the movie producers are going to be asked to do it.

U. S. Must Help France Arm, Roosevelt Says

ful to the Navy and commercial aviation. He said the Navy "hopes" that international conditions will not require a change in policy.

Changes involving most of the top-rank officers of both the Army and Navy will be made this spring and summer, it was revealed.

Kern Dodge, president of the Air Defense League of the United States, advocated consolidation of the War and Navy Departments into a Department of National Defense, with separate administration of aviation, in testimony before the House Military Affairs Committee.

The President said at his press conference that for the last two years the Government has been encouraging foreign governments to buy planes in this country for the purpose of putting people to work and to enable the industry to go through the experimental period of mass production.

Because Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had participated in the French negotiations, the President was pressed as to wether or not any use of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, used to prevent violent fluctuations in foreign exchange, was contemplated. Members said after the meeting that they were convinced this was not involved.

In the session with the Senators, the President is said to have discussed Nazi inroads in Latin America and to have asserted increased trade, including aircraft sales, with South America should be encouraged to offset it.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, Military Affairs committeeman, protested against the President's pledge of secrecy on the conference "when there is so much to be said about it." Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, also criticized the action, declaring that "if we are playing some supposedly clever diplomatic game that may place us in an equivocal condition in the future, the American people are entitled to know it."

Other members of the committee, however, declared that they agreed with the President's stand on the sale of planes and favored the creation of a military plane export market among the democracies.

Air Minister Le Chambre, of France, cited Germany's superiority in plane production yesterday before the French Chamber of Deputies, in defending his American plane purchases. Declaring that Germany is building 1,000 planes a month, Great Britain 400, and his own nation but 90, La Chambre said France was securing "the best airplanes of the United States" through the efforts of President Roosevelt. He said that "the great American democracy is giving its entire help—because in serving France it is serving the cause of peace."

Leaders to Retire

Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, said he would propose an amendment to the $85,000,000 bill authorizing the development of Guam and 11 other naval air bases, to permit the Navy Department ot fortify all of the bases "when necessary."

Meanwhile, it was pointed out that President Roosevelt within the next few months will have to pick successors for both Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the Army, and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, as well as most of the ranking officers of the fleet and air branches.

Admiral Leahy retires for age at the end of May, and Gen. Craig reaches the age limit September 1. In addition, the four-year tour of Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, chief of the General Headquarters Air Force, and Brig. Gen. Augustine W. Robins, assistant chief of Air Corps, expire in March and July.

The Navy expects that for the first time in years all of its four-star admirals and vice admirals will be replaced. Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander in chief of the U. S. Fleet, will complete three years at sea in June and normally is due to come ashore. Admiral Harry E. Yarnall, commander of Asiatic Fleet, will be 64 years old next fall and under the law must retire.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 31.—Glenn L. Martin, head of the airplane manufacturing company that bears his name, said today he was prepared to start turning out 1,200 bombing planes a year and that he anticipates that within a year 10,000 men would be employed at his Middle River plant.

The factory now is running 16 hours a day, five days a week with 2,600 men working in the day time and 1,400 at night.

"We would have no difficulty producing 1,200 bombing planes per year after production had been started," he said. "The starting date would depend on which of our new bombing models was selected for production."

School Talent in Radio Series

Radio

presentation is expected to be included.

Approving the Workshop broadcasts, the Board of Education called attention to the widespread interest of students in all phases of radio work. Not only are prospective musicians, actors and other types of entertainers looking to the radio for careers, but so are would-be announcers, newscasters, program directors, script writers, publicity men and radio mechanics. The opportunity for all these aspirants to work with adults actually engaged in such vocations was considered important.

The Central High School Radio Guild, which has been producing programs for student consumption all winter, will be the first to appear in the Workshop. Central entertainers, program directors, script writers, announcers and students interested in the technical work of broadcasting will be in the WJSV studios tomorrow night as the first program of the series goes on the air.

Sponsors of the series said the weekly programs will not be devoted necessarily to the efforts of a single schools. However, one school probably will dominate each program, so that the first broadcast will be given principally by Central students.

The second program, a week from Thursday night, will be a Western High broadcast. Subsequent workshop programs will present the radio talent of other high schools.

While all details of the first program will not be announced before the broadcast, a feature of tomorrow night's Central show will be a dramatization of Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Sire de Maletroit's Door." This story was adapted by Pete Smith, of Central.

The element of competition, spurring students to put only their best work before the microphone, has been introduced into workshop activities. Two combination phonograph-radio sets will be awarded at end of the school year to broadcasting units judged the best.

Judging will be based altogether on entertainment value of the presentation, whether it be a monologue, an instrumental solo, a chorus number or a dramatic skit. The phonograph-radio sets, both Magnavox instruments, will be awarded as follows: One to the school in Divisions 1 to 9 and the other to that in Divisions 10 to 13 presenting the best entertainment unit.

Judges have been announced as follows: A. D. Willard, jr., general manager of WJSV; Shannon Allen, acting director, radio section of the division of information, U. S. Department of the Interior; Ray C. B. Brown, music critic of The Post, and Nelson B. Bell, The Post's drama critic.

Members of the public school administrative staff were named yesterday to places on the general committee supervising activities of the Students' Radio Guild and the Workshop, as well as on program committees for Divisions 1-9 and 10-13.

Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, assistant superintendent of schools, is chairman of the general committee. Under him will be Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools; Norman J. Nelson, principal of Woodrow Wilson High School; Lawrence G. Hoover, principal at Central; G. David Houston, Armstrong High principal; Willard, of WJSV, and C. F. Moore of The Post.

On the program committee for divisions 1 to 9 are: Hoover, chairman; Nelson, Willard, Moore, and C. E. Bish, assistant principal at Roosevelt; Mrs. O. H. Corkery, assistant principal at Anacostia; Miss H. C. Derrick, McKinley High teacher; Miss Zella Faris, Eastern High teacher, and Miss Sue H. Gardner, teacher at Western.

The program committee for Divisions 10 to 13 consists of Houston, chairman; Mrs. J. M. Tate, assistant principal at Cardozo; Miss Julia E. Brooks, assistant principal at Dunbar, and Willard and Moore.

such authority it ought to try to get the law changed. "They could never get a bill like that through Congress," he said. "What would the American Bankers Association say?"

Stanley contended that no matter how sound the bank might be it would be ruined by such an investigation, in which the SEC "commissioners would be both judges and prosecutors." He said the bank already had been harmed by the suggestions of irregular practices contained in the subpenas.

Justice O'Donoghue said he did not believe the authority of the SEC was so narrowly constricted by the act which established it.

"This is a new act," the court said. "It is blazing the way for the benefit of the public and for the protection of the public. The act was passed after the financial crash of 1929 and after the closing of all the banks in 1933. The act does not exempt banks, expressly or by implication, from being under the jurisdiction and control of the commission."

"There can be no doubt," the opinion held, "that the SEC has the duty placed upon it to ascertain the value of the stock of the plaintiff bank that was held and owned" by Transamerica.

Justice O'Donoghue observed that the SEC could determine this value from the bank's statement, from information supplied by the Comptroller of the Currency, or that the SEC might "make independent investigation as to the real value, the fair value, of that bank's stock. In the opinion of the court, the SEC has the right to use all these means.

Of the fears professed by the bank that public inquiry would do irreparable injury, Justice O'Donoghue said he thought that "a fair estimate of real value of their stock is not going to hurt the bank and it will protect the public in buying the securities of the holding company. This act is modern legislation and it should be construed by the court for the purpose of attaining the end that Congress had in mind in passing this act."

Elsewhere the court cautioned tha the did "not mean to say that the SEC can run wild and do anything they choose and subpena people right and left and put them to unbearable inconvenience and great losses, just on a fishing expedition or a wild goose chase."

Justice O'Donoghue excluded the idea that he was denying the bank an injunction for procedural reasons. He said if the bank actually had a grievance it would be unreasonable to keep it out of court until the commission finished its action. SEC attorneys argued that the injunction suit was premature.

Nation's Biggest Spinach Eaters Found in West

The Nation's biggest spinach eaters live on the West Coast, according to a three-year study of the diets by the United States Bureau of Home Economics.

The most consistent egg eaters inhabit the Southern regions, while butter consumption runs highest in the North Central States, according to the report which reveals that potaties are the favorite vegetable of the Nation, as a whole, and beef the favorite meat.

School Board to Study 'Shut-Ins' Plight Today

Progress reported on the WPA-sponsored program of instruction for shut-in children in the District will be studied today at 3:30 p. m. by the Board of Education in its first February meeting, at the Franklin Building, Thirteenth and K streets northwest. The program, providing visiting teachers for crippled children unable to attend the Langdon School for Crippled Children, because of limited transportation facilities, has been endangered by the proposal to remove from WPA rolls all women with dependent children—held eligible for social security benefits.

the situation adequately without working injustices.

As a reporter suggested requiring a judicial appointee to make a public record of his business holdings and take a pledge to sit in no cases involving them, the President nodded approvingly.

Chairman Sumners said he had given much thought to limiting private activities of judges but had found no solution.

He said, however, he hoped Congress would find a new procedure, less complicated than impeachment, for dealing with charges involving judges. He suggested that in cases involving a judge not a member of the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals, the Chief Justice be authorized to appoint a committee of three judges of the Circuit Court to hear charges brought by the House. An appeal to the Supreme Court would be provided.

Two new courses designed to give Washington's pharmacists and drug clerks a chance to equip themselves for speedier promotion will be added to the vocational education program of the District schools in the second semester, beginning February 6, Dr. Chester W. U. S. Must Help France Arm, Roosevelt Says ful to the Navy and commercial aviation. He said the Navy "hopes" that international conditions will not require a change in policy.

Changes involving most of the top-rank officers of both the Army and Navy will be made this spring and summer, it was revealed.

Kern Dodge, president of the Air Defense League of the United States, advocated consolidation of the War and Navy Departments into a Department of National Defense, with separate administration of aviation, in testimony before the House Military Affairs Committee.

The President said at his press conference that for the last two years the Government has been encouraging foreign governments to buy planes in this country for the purpose of putting people to work and to enable the industry to go through the experimental period of mass production.

Because Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had participated in the French negotiations, the President was pressed as to wether or not any use of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, used to prevent violent fluctuations in foreign exchange, was contemplated. Members said after the meeting that they were convinced this was not involved.

In the session with the Senators, the President is said to have discussed Nazi inroads in Latin America and to have asserted increased trade, including aircraft sales, with South America should be encouraged to offset it.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, Military Affairs committeeman, protested against the President's pledge of secrecy on the conference "when there is so much to be said about it." Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, also criticized the action, declaring that "if we are playing some supposedly clever diplomatic game that may place us in an equivocal condition in the future, the American people are entitled to know it."

Other members of the committee, however, declared that they agreed with the President's stand on the sale of planes and favored the creation of a military plane export market among the democracies.

Air Minister Le Chambre, of France, cited Germany's superiority in plane production yesterday before the French Chamber of Deputies, in defending his American plane purchases. Declaring that Germany is building 1,000 planes a month. Great Britain 400, and his own nation but 90, La Chambre said France was securing "the best airplanes of the United States" through the efforts of President Roosevelt. He said that "the great American democracy is giving its entire help—because in serving France it is serving the cause of peace."

Leaders to Retire

Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, said he would propose an amendment to the $85,000,000 bill authorizing the development of Guam and 11 other naval air bases, to permit the Navy Department ot fortify all of the bases "when necessary."

Meanwhile, it was pointed out that President Roosevelt within the next few months will have to pick successors for both Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the Army, and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, as well as most of the ranking officers of the fleet and air branches.

Admiral Leahy retires for age at the end of May, and Gen. Craig reaches the age limit September 1. In addition, the four-year tour of Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, chief of the General Headquarters Air Force, and Brig. Gen. Augustine W. Robins, assistant chief of Air Corps, expire in March and July.

The Navy expects that for the first time in years all of its four-star admirals and vice admirals will be replaced. Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander in chief of the U. S. Fleet, will complete three years at sea in June and normally is due to come ashore. Admiral Harry E. Yarnall, commander of Asiatic Fleet, will be 64 years old next fall and under the law must retire.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 31.—Glenn L. Martin, head of the airplane manufacturing company that bears his name, said today he was prepared to start turning out 1,200 bombing planes a year and that he anticipates that within a year 10,000 men would be employed at his Middle River plant.

The factory now is running 16 hours a day, five days a week with 2,600 men working in the day time and 1,400 at night.

"We would have no difficulty producing 1,200 bombing planes per year after production had been started," he said. "The starting date would depend on which of our new bombing models was selected for production."

School Talent in Radio Series

presentation is expected to be included.

Approving the Workshop broadcasts, the Board of Education called attention to the widespread interest of students in all phases of radio work. Not only are prospective musicians, actors and other types of entertainers looking to the radio for careers, but so are would-be announcers, newscasters, program directors, script writers, publicity men and radio mechanics. The opportunity for all these aspirants to work with adults actually engaged in such vocations was considered important.

The Central High School Radio Guild, which has been producing programs for student consumption all winter, will be the first to appear in the Workshop. Central entertainers, program directors, script writers, announcers and students interested in the technical work of broadcasting will be in the WJSV studios tomorrow night as the first program of the series goes on the air.

Sponsors of the series said the weekly programs will not be devoted necessarily to the efforts of a single schools. However, one school probably will dominate each program, so that the first broadcast will be given principally by Central students.

The second program, a week from Thursday night, will be a Western High broadcast. Subsequent workshop programs will present the radio talent of other high schools.

While all details of the first program will not be announced before the broadcast, a feature of tomorrow night's Central show will be a dramatization of Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Sire de Maletroit's Door." This story was adapted by Pete Smith, of Central.

The element of competition, spurring students to put only their best work before the microphone, has been introduced into workshop activities. Two combination phonograph-radio sets will be awarded at end of the school year to broadcasting units judged the best.

Judging will be based altogether on entertainment value of the presentation, whether it be a monologue, an instrumental solo, a chorus number or a dramatic skit. The phonograph-radio sets, both Magnavox instruments, will be awarded as follows: One to the school in Divisions 1 to 9 and the other to that in Divisions 10 to 13 presenting the best entertainment unit.

Judges have been announced as follows: A. D. Willard, jr., general manager of WJSV; Shannon Allen, acting director, radio section of the division of information, U. S. Department of the Interior; Ray C. B. Brown, music critic of The Post, and Nelson B. Bell, The Post's drama critic.

Members of the public school administrative staff were named yesterday to places on the general committee supervising activities of the Students' Radio Guild and the Workshop, as well as on program committees for Divisions 1-9 and 10-13.

Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, assistant superintendent of schools, is chairman of the general committee. Under him will be Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools; Norman J. Nelson, principal of Woodrow Wilson High School; Lawrence G. Hoover, principal at Central; G. David Houston, Armstrong High principal; Willard, of WJSV, and C. F. Moore of The Post.

On the program committee for divisions 1 to 9 are: Hoover, chairman; Nelson, Willard, Moore, and C. E. Bish, assistant principal at Roosevelt; Mrs. O. H. Corkery, assistant principal at Anacostia; Miss H. C. Derrick, McKinley High teacher; Miss Zella Faris, Eastern High teacher, and Miss Sue H. Gardner, teacher at Western.

The program committee for Divisions 10 to 13 consists of Houston, chairman; Mrs. J. M. Tate, assistant principal at Cardozo; Miss Julia E. Brooks, assistant principal at Dunbar, and Willard and Moore.

such authority it ought to try to get the law changed. "They could never get a bill like that through Congress," he said. "What would the American Bankers Association say?"

Stanley contended that no matter how sound the bank might be it would be ruined by such an investigation, in which the SEC "commissioners would be both judges and prosecutors." He said the bank already had been harmed by the suggestions of irregular practices contained in the subpenas.

Justice O'Donoghue said he did not believe the authority of the SEC was so narrowly constricted by the act which established it.

"This is a new act," the court said. "It is blazing the way for the benefit of the public and for the protection of the public. The act was passed after the financial crash of 1929 and after the closing of all the banks in 1933. The act does not exempt banks, expressly or by implication, from being under the jurisdiction and control of the commission."

"There can be no doubt," the opinion held, "that the SEC has the duty placed upon it to ascertain the value of the stock of the plaintiff bank that was held and owned" by Transamerica.

Justice O'Donoghue observed that the SEC could determine this value from the bank's statement, from information supplied by the Comptroller of the Currency, or that the SEC might "make independent investigation as to the real value, the fair value, of that bank's stock. In the opinion of the court, the SEC has the right to use all these means.

Of the fears professed by the bank that public inquiry would do irreparable injury, Justice O'Donoghue said he thought that "a fair estimate of real value of their stock is not going to hurt the bank and it will protect the public in buying the securities of the holding company. This act is modern legislation and it should be construed by the court for the purpose of attaining the end that Congress had in mind in passing this act."

Elsewhere the court cautioned tha the did "not mean to say that the SEC can run wild and do anything they choose and subpena people right and left and put them to unbearable inconvenience and great losses, just on a fishing expedition or a wild goose chase."

Justice O'Donoghue excluded the idea that he was denying the bank an injunction for procedural reasons. He said if the bank actually had a grievance it would be unreasonable to keep it out of court until the commission finished its action. SEC attorneys argued that the injunction suit was premature.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

A Weary Chairman Pays A Few Belated Tributes

Some Personal Thanks to a Valiant Crew; President and Mrs. Roosevelt Motivate Revels; Highlights and Sidelights of Memorable Evening

NOW that "the tumult and the shouting dies and the captains and the kings depart," there remains a debt of deep appreciation and gratitude to be paid by the chairman of the entertainment committee for the President's Birthday Celebrations to those who assisted him so unflaggingly in the discharge of complex and far-flung duties.

BELL

All of the committees, of whatever nature, spread across these United States in the common fight against the ravages of infantile paralysis, I think, are conscious that President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt, by their profound interest in the cause and gracious spirit of co-operation with all who are in any way connected with it, are chiefly responsible for the success of these annual enterprises, observed on the President's birthday. As a minor cog in an intricate bit of executive machinery, I am warmingly conscious of the generous words spoken to me by the President in the White House on Monday night. They always will be cherished.

To the Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of District Commissioners, general chairman of the Washington committee; George Allen, former Commissioner, cochairman; Richmond B. Keech, Melvin Sharpe and all of the others on the executive committee, I am indebted for helpful and sympathetic advice on all of the perplexing problems which, from time to time, confronted the entertainment chairman.

Not to pay high tribute to the co-operation, devotion and indefatigable energy of my invaluable vice chairmen, Carter Barron, Hardie Meakin, John J. Payette and Gene Ford, would be equivalent to the declaration that the engine has no part in the running of a motor car or that eyes are unimportant to vision. These gentlemen worked like Trojans and did their work exceedingly well—probably infinitely better than their chairman did his. And so did my good friend, Harry Anger, who shared with Gene Ford the arduous task of staging the midnight shows at Loew's Capitol and the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, which involved more than meets the eye by reason of the necessity of keeping the shows running and at the same time shifting orchestras and choruses from one house to the other, along with all of the stellar acts, on a rigid schedule.

Frank Fay Shows What a "Trouper" Is Like

In this connection, also, I am overwhelmingly indebted to Old Pal Frank Fay for having come to Washington on personal invitation in the first place, to act as master of ceremonies at the Gold Plate Breakfast, at the Carlton, and then stepping into the breech and serving for an unprogrammed hour and a half on the Capitol stage, prior to his tour of duty at the Carlton. By the time I caught up with him Monday night, Mr. Fay was pretty well fagged out, but still game to undertake anything further he might be asked to do. A real trouper, that Fay fellow. But all this is only the beginning.

The radio interests that played so important a part in the local President's Birthday Celebrations are no less to be extolled for their whole-hearted co-operation in everything that was planned by the entertainment committee. Kenneth Berkeley, "Bill" Dolph, Ann Gillis, Harry Butcher, "Scoop" Russell, "Jess" Willard and all of the other radio station executives were top-hole. So were their outstanding air-wave personalities, who mastered ceremonies at the various hotels celebrating Presidential Birthday Balls—Arch McDonald, Tony Wakeman, Gordon Hittenmark, Lee Everett, Warren Sweeney, Bill Crago, Charles Daly and all the rest. Some of these boys have been annoyed with me on the air occasionally, so knew what they were up against, and did it all, anyway.

It would be in the nature of piling Ossa on Pelion—or is that wrong side up?—to express any further thoughts than we already have put in print concerning the willingness of the Hollywood stars, Paul Whiteman, Eddie LeBaron and all the other celebrities who acceded to our requests to be present, in some instances at great personal sacrifices. We are no less indebted to the West Coast studios that permitted them to make the long journey to Wahington. A great deal could be written about the stars we hoped to get and didn't, but that is water over the bridge. Those who came completely upheld the Hollywood fidelity to Washington on this annual occasion. Luise Rainer, lamentably, is confined to a New York hospital and was physically unable to reach the Capital.

"Show Business" Goes to Bat

I would be remiss, too, if no mention were made of the fine aid given the entertainment committee by my associates on the drama desks of the Washington press—especially Andrew R. Kelley and Betty Hynes, who "played up" every fragment of news copy and art that was transmitted to them by those two stalwart workers, Frank La Falce and J. Raymond Bell—no relation—of the Warner Brothers and Loew publicity departments, who worked heart-breaking hours and achieved unbelievable results. The same is true of Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National Theater. Mr. Plohn and the rest of us—including Lee and J. J. Shubert and Claude P. Greneker, their representative, who came to Washington on that specific errand—sweat a little blood when complications arose that prevented the projected "command performance" of Olsen and Johnson in that fabulous musical hit on Broadway, "Hellzapoppin." The determining factors were beyond our joint control. That, however, was completely compensated for by the sensational success of "Outward Bound," which sold out the house for last Sunday night in a brief three days. My own and the general committee's gratitude to the Playhouse Company, Bramwell Fletcher in particular, for this valiant gesture—and to President and Mrs. Roosevelt for attending the performance.

Then there was the matter of floor shows at the hotels presenting the Birthday Balls. For their success, we are deeply indebted to Clarke Davis, of the Lichtman Theaters, for an heroic job faultlessly executed on notice shorter than it should have been. And we are equally indebted to A. E. Lichtman, owner of the Lichtman Theaters and Chief Barker of the Washington Variety Club, for having acted as personal host in the clubrooms in the Willard Hotel at the "Little Gold Plate Breakfast," which so far as I know, may be going on yet!

And I have no intention, either, of omitting mention of the incalculably valuable aid rendered the committee by the Washington Association of Hotelmen, under the presidency of L. Gardner Moore, manager of the Shoreham, who relieved heavily weighted shoulders of still another burden. Harry P. Somerville, of the Willard; Mr. Pollio, of the Mayflower, and all of their associates were sources of strength in a time of weakness.

This could go on indefinitely, but might be concluded with a blanket word of thanks to all of the showmen in Washington—the theater managers, the film exchange managers, the publicists, the managerial staffs of all the local theatrical interests and all who did so much to help. That thanks is hereby extended with a sense of profound personal obligation to all of these ardent workers with whom this department has been associated for so many years.

Maybe sometime I'll be able to do something for them.

The President's 11:30 p. m. broadcast from the White House Monday night was a felicitous occasion. President Roosevelt already had met all of the visiting stars, but greeted them all again, notwithstanding, with your reporter making the introductions as the line of some 75 or 100 attendants at the occasion filed by the Presidential desk. This task was made a simple and completely enjoyable one by the high good humor and helpful camaraderie of the Chief Executive. Steve Early and Col. Marvin McIntyre, of the Presidential secretariat, old friends both, lent the hour in the White House a welcome and appreciated "lift."

Some "Gold Plate" Ham and Eggs, for Two!

The Gold Plate Breakfast at the Carlton was illuminated by many unexpected highlights. A caller in Carter Barron's suite, on the second floor, prior to the opening of the 2 a. m. festivities that lasted until daybreak, or thereabouts, was Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace, who was importuned, without favorable result, to "take a bow," but had to catch a 2:10 a. m., train to New York, instead . . . While the rich repast comprising the Carlton's matutinal menu was being served, Andrea Leeds, star from the Samuel Goldwyn lot, and her escort, Ben Washer, from United Artists' New York office, put in an order for scrambled eggs and bacon, which was promptly and appetizingly filled . . . All of the stars in attendance, led by Ralph Bellamy, Miss Leeds and Jean Hersholt, were guests, at one time or another, at the spacious round table of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, where they stole surreptitious and wide-eyed glimpses of the famous Hope diamond, which adorned their momentary hostess.

Recapitulation Note

If this summary—and it is only partial—has bored a great number of people, my humble apologies. Feeling an intense personal gratitude to all concerned, I have perhaps deluded myself that Washington might feel the same way about a memorable evening in the life of the National Capital.

Clive Lives Role

R. E. Clive has played the supporting role of "Tenny" in a dozen "Bulldog Drummond" pictures made in Hollywood, including the latest, "Bulldog Drummond's Secret Police," in which John Howard plays the leading role.

Romance Returns to Metropolitan

HERBERT MARSHALL AND CLAUDETTE COLBERT as they appear in the roles of Dufresne and the music hall artiste of the title, in Paramount's picturization of the famous stage play, "Zaza." Having played a successful week at the Earle, "Zaza" returns to the downtown screen today as chief feature of the bill at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 31.—Another day with nothing much to do . . . Up at 8, fitted a couple of new dresses at 9, whipped out some frivolous news by 10. That finished, drove over to George Putnam's to lunch with him and Gabriel Pascal. What an entertaining man—I suspect he has a lot of gypsy in him, and don't wonder George Bernard Shaw fell for him, he's so disarmingly honest and blunt. And if you haven't seen his "Pygmalion," don't wait—run to the theater where it's showing. More about him and his plans later.

HEDDA HOPPER

On the way home, stopped at Universal to say hello to Deanna Durbin, who was that excited planning a birthday party for her sister. 'Cause Deanna wants to dance, she's growing up so fast—why shouldn't she have a little fun?

Of course, working with Henry Koster, Joe Pasternack and Cameraman Valentine isn't hard to take, either. Each morning they're handed about four pages of script, that's the day's work. When you leave the studio, they don't want you to think about work—not 'til next morning.

Papa Charlie Winniger and I went into a huddle about doing a Show Boat at the San Francisco Fair, and really we're very excited about it. Wouldn't it be fun?

Then, on to see Edgar Bergen, who was sitting in his dressing room munching a jelly sandwich and sipping a glass of milk his man had brought from home in a paper bag. Edgar was dressed as a Swedish maid with the blonde wig off. Trying to learn a new scene he'd just written for the finish of "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man."

He asked what I was going to wear to his party tonight and suggested tights.' I might even do it and surprise him. But I'm afraid I'd shock me!

I waited to watch him do the scene—it was one of the funniest things I've ever witnessed. He's got Charlie dressed up as a blonde baby in the same kind of an outfit that he wears, and he comes on the scene to bust up Constance Moore's marriage, 'cause he loves her, too. Claiming the bridegroom is the father of his baby, he says, "Don't you remember the night at the country club—I was the waitress?" The dignified mother, played by Mary Forbes, says, "And to think—this happened in my house." Edgar, with a Swedish accent, says, "No, at the Country Club." And then Charlie raises his head from Edgar's shoulder and looks them all over.

Constance Moore, who came here a year and a half ago as a singer, does her first warbling in this. She sings the theme song, "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man." It's just a bit of our whimsey. Singers get acting jobs, actors sing. Gladys Swarthout got $60,000 for "Ambush"—didn't warble a note. And yet, it's the best picture she's done. Maybe producers aren't so crazy after all.

W. C. Fields' stand-in, who looks more like Fields than Fields—talks like him, too—told me he was just back from the Paladium in London, where he made love to Greta Garbo's stand-in, and the thing they loved was this, "So you want to be alone? Well, marry me, and you'll be alone the rest of your life."

Edgar told me he'd gone right from his radio rehearsal to the Rathbone party, but when he arrived and saw everybody in tails and white tie, he turned tail and went home—couldn't face his hostess without proper clothes. "Why, Edgar, I'd welcome you in a nightshirt." "When?" piped up Charlie.

And for those who tell you that that picture is 'way over schedule, today it's right on the nose. Quite a feather in Universal's cap for they haven't interfered once. "Boys," they said, "you know what we want and you know more about comedy than we'll ever know. We don't care how or when you write your stuff, or how long it takes." And the boys are bringing it in on time. Maybe other studios could take a lesson from this.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 31.

". . . and I notice that you don't go to that place any more . . . Really? . . . And Walter doesn't go there either? . . . Well, keep quiet about it, and don't let it get around. It might give the place a good name."

12-P. M.: "George Weinberg," an official confides at Moore's, "had sent word to friends of Hines—that he was sorry he had testified against him, and might spill a different story at the retrial. Schoenhaus, also, has indicated to Dewey that he'd rather not testify" . . . "And so I offered this big-money radio program to John Roosevelt, the only one of his family who never has broadcast," a radio executive laments at the tavern, "but John said he couldn't do it—because he's too busy with his $18-a-week job" . . . "Those Sally Clark wedding photos will appear as an ad for that soap company, in April," a ringsider reports at LaRue's. Although Sally got paid for it, her mother signed the contract, and selected the photos."

1 A. M.: "I've got one day free, between engagements," Eddy Duchin states at the Stork Club, "so I'm flying to Palm Springs, to see my son. I'd have five hours more with my boy, if I could get the plane to stop at Palm Springs, en route. So I went to Washington last week, to ask the consent of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. After they started examining me, I told them to call it off" . . . "This Montreal friend of mine never had met Brenda Frazier," a blueblood states at the Havana-Madrid, "and wanted to meet her. So he phoned her, managed to get Brenda on the phone—and that night he took her to dinner" . . . "Elsa Maxwell will sue Paramount, if the stout party-giver in the movie, 'Cafe Society,' resembles her," one of Elsa's friends declares at the Cotton Club. "Elsa told me: 'My personality is my fortune, and so is a tangible asset which means everything to my existence. If anybody infringes on it, I'll bring suit.'"

2 A. M.: "The Montreal censors finally approved the Mussolini-motherhood satire in 'Pins and Needles,'" a producer informs at the Yacht Club. "They relented—but on condition that the 'mothers' in the skit draw in their corsets" . . . "I just left Jim Farley. He's very sick," a politician reports at N. T. G.'s . . . Employes of a company which has 275 chain stores here are planning to strike this week," a publisher confides at the Versailles. "The company heads are all prepared—with signs reading 'Permanently Closed' and requesting customers to patronize other stores" . . . "So Jane Cowl and the rest decided to continue 'The Merchant of Yonkers' on a co-operative basis," June Walker confesses at Sardi's. "I volunteered to try and get a theater because I'm experienced in show business. The first one I tried to phone was Joe Leblang. They told me he died—six years ago!"

3 A. M.: "Please type this letter for me," the proprietors tell Pat Bird, cloakroom girl at the Radio Franks . . . "But I can't type," Pat protests . . . "Didn't you tell us when we hired you that you had been a secretary?" Miss Bird is asked . . . "Yes, but that doesn't mean I can type," she explains. "I was a secretary—to Tommy Manville" . . . "I just got back from Japan," a reporter relates at Leon & Eddie's. "The Emperor there always looks so ill-dressed because commoners mustn't touch him—and so his tailor, holding a tape measure, estimates the Emperor's clothes measure from a distance 20 feet away" . . . "Darryl Zanuck tells this about one of his producing aides," a scenarist reports at the Village Barn. "The producer told a group of newcomers. 'When I started in Hollywood I didn't have a cent to my name' . . . 'So what did you do?' he was asked . . . 'It was simple,' he answered. 'I changed my name.'"

4 A. M.: "Just got word from Florida," a night-club owner states at La Cava, "that there'll be open gambling this week throughout Miami Beach. Jack Dempsey's Vanderbilt is all set" . . . "Marshall Heminway took Paul Yarburg and his bride-to-be into the lounge here, and lectured them about marriage," a waiter informs at El Morocco. "Heminway first took two logs from the fireplace, put them on the table, and began: 'This is MY Fireside Chat'" . . . Raymond Massey's 'Abe Lincoln' has revived all the stories," a producer declares at Armando's. "Massey therefore insists that he feels so suited to the role that he's trying to raise a wart."

5 A. M.: "The Yale Puppeteers played at a private party Saturday for I. A. R. Wylie, who's written some of the best anti-Nazi stories," a publicist states at the Kit Kat Klub. "They felt that Wyle might be offended at it—so the Puppeteers yanked the show's highlight—the Eleanor Roosevelt satire."

6 A. M.: ". . . and next time I won't wake you for a news-story . . . What? You don't remember? . . . Well, I woke you when that poor man's body was found . . . Yes, you answered . . . You said if it's suicide, I should phone the paper. And if it's murder, I should call Sam Leibowitz."

Conferees Put Ban on Politics In Relief Only

of relief funds. Outside the scope of relief appropriations, it makes it unlawful for anyone to promise directly or indirectly any employment, position, work, compensation or other benefit in return for political support.

Favored by Senator Barkley, this provision was left in the bill, even though it strikes at Senate and House members themselves, as well as high Government officials, and imposes a $1,000 fine or one year in jail for offering patronage inducements for political support.

Other Restrictions

Other politics prohibitions left in the bill:

Make it unlawful to deprive or threaten to deprive anyone paid from relief funds of his job because of "race, creed, color, support of, or opposition to any candidate or any political party in any election."

Prohibit anyone in a supervisory or administrative capacity who is paid from relief funds from using his official influence for the purpose of interfering with an election.

In swift order the conferees agreed to the $150,000,000 cut under the President's WPA estimates and to the Senate amendments which ease the slash first by prohibiting more than 5 per cent reductions in rolls in the next two months, and by virtually inviting the President to submit additional estimates if a relief "emergency" develops.

Only one provision of the bill was left in disagreement as the conferees adjourned—a House requirement limiting regional differentials in WPA pay to 25 per cent. This must go back to the House and Senate for a separate vote, probably tomorrow.

25,000 Others Affected

Of paramount interest to Government employes, the conferees retained the Senate provision barring civil service coverage for any worker in any department whose salary is paid from emergency relief funds. In addition to WPA administrative and field staff employes directly affected, this ban applies against some 25,000 in other Federal agencies paid from relief appropriations, including workers scattered through the Agriculture Department, the General Accounting Office, the Farm Credit Administration, the Justice and Treasury departments, the Farm Security Administration, the National Emergency Council, the United States Employes Compensation Commission, and others. A movement was under way in the House Appropriations Committee to soften the blow by providing sufficient funds in the regular appropriation bills to pay their salaries without recourse to relief funds.

Agreement on the $725,000,000 figure was automatic, both houses having approved the figure, but acceptance of added Senate and House provisions followed the usual conference agreement.

Inquiry Provided

In its completed form, the relief bill also provides:

An immediate WPA investigation of its rolls with a view to eliminating "those not in actual need." WPA Administrator Harrington yesterday told the Women's National Press Club he is prepared to start this investigation at once.

A flat ban against employment of aliens on WPA, with the House provision modified to require only an affidavit as proof of citizenship.

Relief workers must accept private employment if it affords reasonable working conditions and pays the prevailing wage.

Relief funds are not to be used for Naval or military armaments.

Relief funds shall not be used for establishment of mills and factories in competition with private industry.

Authorization for WPA to use $15,000,000 of the $725,000,000 for direct relief.

Harrington Ready

Col. Francis Harrington, WPA administrator, declared yesterday that his organization is ready to investigate immediately the eligibility of the Nation's 3,000,000 WPA workers.

In some of the States, Col. Harrington said, Federal investigators will be necessary. In others, the word and records of State administrators will be acceptable. The method used in records will be the determining factor.

He told the Women's National Press Club that some of the sewing projects need "cleaning up."

"Some of these women have been sewing for five years . . . Some of them, I know, never had employment before the WPA," he declared.

Col. Harrington said he welcomed the Congressional WPA amendment in regard to politics in relief.

He expressed the opinion that former Administrator Harry Hopkins kept WPA rolls remarkably free of politics, "in view of the fact that he had no legal teeth behind him."

trative assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury; Leonard White, professor of political science at the University of Chicago and former Republican member of the Civil Service Commission; Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Gano Dunn, president of the J. G. White Engineering Co.

"The committee," the White House announcement said, "will study the many diverse problems presented in the recruiting and promotion of professional, administrative and other technical personnel. The President believes that such a study will result in an informed and wise extension of the merit system and an application of higher standards in the selection and promotion of such Government personnel."

"Outstanding Advocates of Reform"

The June 24 order, the President recalled, directed heads of establishments to suggest positions which should be exempt from civil service on the ground that they were policy-making or for other reasons. Many proposals for exemption were received, some of which the Civil Service Commission objected to.

The task of covering-in positions not to be granted exemption, the President declared, did not permit sufficient time to work out an acceptable pattern for specialized groups.

Members of the committee, the President declared, are "outstanding advocates of civil service reform" and have had wide experience in the selection of professional, scientific and commercial personnel.

Among those temporarily exempted from civil service are private secretaries to Cabinet officers and other policy-making officials, employes of the Inland Waterways Corporation, persons engaged in supervisory work and others holding higher-grade positions, and certain low-paid, part-time workers whom it would be impracticable to bring under civil service.

Seek More Flexible Plan

The committee, it was explained, will try to work out a more flexible and realistic plan for hiring lawyers, economists, scientists and others which will permit them to be under civil service and at the same time will insure high-class personnel.

The President said, in response to a question, that the problem of obtaining high caliber men from colleges, in the event lawyers should be brought under civil service, did not figure in the situation in any large degree.

In addition to about 30,000 WPA employes, an estimated 17,000 to 25,000 workers in the Agriculture, Treasury and other departments and agencies will be barred, in effect, from civil service as a result of the conference committee prohibition.

The way may be paved, however, for bringing into civil service in the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, employes outside the WPA if provision is made in the appropriation bills now being prepared to pay them out of funds made available for their own agencies.

Such a move, it was learned, is under consideration by members of the House Appropriations subcommittee drafting the independent offices supply bill. If Revision is made in this bill to pay employes out of the funds of their own agencies, a large number of those otherwise barred would be eligible to enter civil service.

The number of persons definitely barred in different departments, on the basis of November civil service statistics, follows: Treasury, 9,973; Justice, 339; Commerce, 389; Labor, 1,002; General Accounting Office, 2,430; National Emergency Council, 302, and National Resources Committee, 70. About 14,600 employes in the Agriculture, Navy, Interior and State Departments, Veterans' Administration and Civil Aeronautics Authority will not know their status until it is made clear what funds various groups are being paid from.

Parran to Get Award for Service

A Nation-wide broadcast of ceremonies in which Mrs. Roosevelt will speak, will be heard at 8,000 similar meetings throughout the land. Greetings will also be extended by Dr. Livingston Farrand, president-emeritus of Cornell University.

Dr. H. H. Hazen will preside and Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr, assistant surgeon general, and Dr. Walter W. Clarke, executive director of the association, are scheduled to speak.

Hugh R. Dowling, attorney, and Police Capt. Rhoda Milliken, will speak on law enforcement and community protection measures.

Monopoly Probers To Open Insurance Hearings Feb. 6

The President's special monopoly committee at a meeting yesterday scheduled public hearings opening February 6 on the scope of activities of insurance companies, their size, and their influence on capital markets.

Following an investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission, the insurance company testimony will be presented to the committee by a series of witnesses called by William O. Douglas, chairman of the commission.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Montana, chairman of the Joint Monopoly Committee, in a statement said that "nothing has been presented to the committee or to the Securities and Exchange Commission which should give any policy holder the slightest concern."

"As a matter of fact," said O'Mahoney, "we feel that the assets are such as to indicate that policies are very well based."

Renewing The Seed

The field of inter-American good will, ploughed deep at Lima last December, must not be allowed to lie fallow in the years between conferences. New seeds of friendship must regularly be planted, the soil cultivated constantly.

It is a happy augury, therefore, that governmental efforts in the direction of closer relations between the republics of this hemisphere are now being supplemented by private endeavors. A case in point is the highly successful goodwill mission to Latin America just concluded by the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religion at the Catholic University, and the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, Bishop of Omaha.

The purpose of this visit was two-fold. In the first place, these two eminent clerics of the Catholic faith endeavored to establish closer fraternal relations between Catholic elements here and those in the nations to our south, with a view to building up a common barrier against totalitarianism. At the same time, they sought through personal contact with the leaders of those republics to foster a better understanding among the nations of the New World. They appear to have been highly successful in both endeavors.

Reporting on his mission, Dr. Sheehy pointed out that Nazi propaganda in Latin America, while intense and widespread, has begun to backfire. This is encouraging news. But, as he rightly points out, that is no reason why we should sit back and do nothing. For, clearly, one reason why Nazi propaganda has failed to achieve its goal has been the growing awareness by all the peoples and governments of this hemisphere of their common interests and of the fact that it is precisely these common interests which are the objects of totalitarian attack.

The Cotton Dilemma

There is ample reason for the alarm felt by Southern legislators over the status of cotton. The outlook for this American staple has been gloomy for a number of years. In recent months it has become little short of desperate. With enormous supplies of American cotton on hand, markets have continued to shrink in a most discouraging fashion.

Government experts say that world conditions are very unfavorable. Japan has reduced her consumption of cotton because of her need for other imports to make war on China. Exports of American cotton to Europe have greatly declined, partly because spinners are using up stocks already on hand. The present uncertainty is not conducive to the building up of supplies for future use. In Germany and Italy the use of synthetic fibers has minimized the demand for cotton.

When all these explanations have been made, however, the policies followed by the AAA still loom as the largest factor in the disaster that is overtaking our cotton-growing industry. Exports are more than 40 per cent below the volume shipped abroad last season. And the most notable decline in the purchase of American cotton is found, not in Japan, Germany, or Italy, but in Great Britain. From August 1 to January 15 we exported 286,000 bales of cotton to Great Britain, compared with 1,014,000 bales for the same period last year.

English mills have been drawing upon stocks of American cotton. So their purchases here will probably increase somewhat when their present supplies are exhausted. The significant fact is that, while Britain's cotton purchases here were on the toboggan, her imports of cotton from other countries increased by more than 120,000 bales.

Actually this disastrous trend should surprise no one. Government loans pegging the price of cotton have permitted foreign growers to obtain the lion's share of the business by undercutting American prices. A truly absurd situation has developed. Warehouses are bursting with surplus cotton on which the Government has made excessive loans. Yet foreign markets for our cotton are rapidly shrinking.

Here is a pitiful commentary on AAA planning. Congress cannot too quickly take cognizance of the dilemma to which Federal control over cotton production has led. Instead of facing this muddle squarely, however, Southern Senators appear to be more interested in formulating plans to transfer the huge losses from farmers to taxpayers.

It is time to ask whether or not the United States intends to withdraw from the world cotton market, and if so what will happen to the people who have formerly earned a livelihood by producing cotton for export. Adoption of another expedient, while maintaining the system that is largely responsible for the current predicament, would only intensify the cotton dilemma.

A Formula Indicated

A strike—even a large strike—in the United States is not a serious matter. Because of the immense area, the diversity of resources, the great reserves of strength in this country a temporary and local dislocation of production processes can be tolerated. The state is not compelled to forbid manifestations of industrial warfare for the simple reason that they are not disastrous for the public as a whole.

In Germany the situation is very different. In that small and comparatively poor nation a major strike has repercussions which shake the entire economic structure. For that essential reason, and not because they are more docile, disciplined or spiritless, the German people can easily be reconciled to an authoritarian government. Labor will tolerate a regime which denies it freedom of protest. And management will accept dictation which to the American employer would spell the end of all individual liberty. It is on that circumstance that the Nazi regime is built.

Chancellor Hitler did not use this particular example in his very important speech to the Reichstag on Monday night. In many similar ways, however, he urged the outside world—to which he really spoke—to realize that his regime should not be judged without reference to the limitations of the German economy. There was a lot of the traditional Hitler in his long address. There was all of the bigotry, the stridency, the fanaticism, distortion and ignorance which are inseparable from the man. But there was also a new Hitler, speaking defensively and not offensively, who for the first time sought the understanding of the democratic powers.

Every objective person will recognize the large amount of truth in Hitler's explanation of how Germany came to be as she is today. There is no denying the strength of his indictment of the attempted reparations system, nor the justice of his conclusion that this "insane procedure" was in large part responsible for the economic collapse of 1929 and all of its disastrous aftermath. There is no novelty in that charge, and no successful way of denying its essential validity. But since reparations have long since been out of the picture nothing practical is gained by voicing the criticism now.

Where Hitler became constructive was not in his denunciation of the steps which forced Germany toward desperation but in his frank admissions that the outcome is, from the German viewpoint, unsatisfactory, and, in the long run, impossible.

Autarchy, he says, was forced on Germany. It was not a Nazi creation and any other form of government, confronted with the same conditions, "would have to follow exactly the same course as the present regime." If by this is meant merely that Germany was forced by events rather than by will to attempt economic self-sufficiency, to resort to barter and to emphasize productive improvement as the sine qua non of national existence, then unquestionably Hitler is right.

But the fundamental significance of his remarks does not lie in the admission that Nazi economics were forced upon Germany, rather than developed as the constructive measure of solution which the propagandists of the regime proclaim. Even more important than this is the further admission that the Nazi economy is not and cannot be adequate to solve Germany's problems. "Conditions today," says Hitler, "make it quite impossible for Germany to withdraw from world trade." Export or die, he says, telling the Reichstag, simply and frankly, that in the vital matter of the German food supply, "nature sets the limit to any further intensification of effort."

There are, the Fuehrer continued, only two ways in which this inescapable problem can be met. One is "the extension of our nation's living space." The other is by increased foreign trade.

Hitler is not yet ready to say bluntly that the first of these alternatives is the road of war; the second that of peace. He talks of colonies, harps on imaginary grievances, sets up all sorts of fantastic alibis to conceal the clear implications of his statement that "before the war Germany was a flourishing economic power." But he has evidently begun to realize that unless he soon decides to risk another war—for territorial expansion—then he must sharply modify the course which he is following. "I wish to make clear," he told the Reichstag, "an existing situation which we must either accept or alter."

For the outside world the moral of this is very clear. The stiffening attitude of the democracies, the active rearmament of Great Britain, France and the United States, are having their effect. They are bringing the Fuehrer to the realization that concessions have limits; that surrender is a policy which other nations will follow only so far; that beyond a point Germany will have to fight—not bluff. And in his heart the Fuehrer does not wish—and does not dare—to fight.

Therefore he speaks to the Reichstag of acceptance. Therefore he tells his people that the four-year plan cannot succeed. Therefore he admits that his regime has contributed nothing constructive except a wholly ruthless direction to a policy ordained for Germany by circumstance. The speech is extraordinary in its frankness. And it may prove of the greatest importance in its results.

Qualified optimism is obviously justified as a result of Hitler's latest speech. It must be qualified for the very reason that he offers no pledges and no guarantees. He intimates that Germany is anxious to turn toward peace. But such an intimation is not enough. Too often other nations have been fooled by fair words, by pledges later violated, on the part of Nazi Germany.

As Neville Chamberlain said in the House of Commons yesterday, not only words but concrete evidence of peaceful intent is needed from Germany now. The speech, in the words of the British Prime Minister, was not that of "a man who is preparing to throw Europe into another crisis." Nor was it that of a man who is as yet wholly convinced that the revolutionary aspect of his mission is ended. A stiffer resistance to the Nazi philosophy, a more intelligent understanding of Germany's desperate economic problems, is the formula now indicated.

Arming For Peace

Preparation for national defense is clearly the most momentous issue before the Seventy-sixth Congress. As committees begin to study the Administration's plans for strengthening the American air force, the Army and the Navy, their attitude will be scrutinized both at home and abroad. And decisions reached by Congress will certainly have an influential bearing upon the trend of world events.

President Roosevelt has asked Congress for comparatively modest increases in our military establishments. He can not reasonably be accused of falling into line with the war hysteria of Europe. But he is properly concerned over the adequate defense of our own country and its vital interests. Members of Congress owe it to themselves and their constituents to examine the national defense program in that same patriotic spirit.

While the measures Congress has been asked to approve are necessarily designed to strengthen this country's powers of self-defense, they cannot be dissociated from the larger problem of world peace. A determination on the part of the American Government to make this country invulnerable and to uphold the rights of its citizens will automatically become a stabilizing factor in the field of international relations. Aggression flourishes when those countries which abhor aggression are weak.

Both France and Great Britain are making notable additions to their military strength. The United States cannot avoid a keen interest in these preparations, for the danger of war against which the democracies of Europe are arming is virtually the same danger which makes it advisable for the United States to enhance its powers of defense. The Administration's efforts to facilitate the sale of airplanes to France may well be a factor in the slight relaxation of tensions noted in Europe at the moment.

Further progress in American rearmament should have much the same effect. There is not the slightest probability that the United States will use its strength for aggressive purposes. That fact, plus a vigorous policy of self-defense, should be a salutary restraining influence upon any country seeking to remake the map of the world by force. As Congress studies in detail the need for larger military and naval appropriations these considerations are likely to stand out with still greater clarity.

Pink Lemonade

This week the Circus Saints and Sinners Club, with other showmen (similarly bound by links fraternal, charitable, kind), in Richmond met to formulate a plan to found a home for aged circus showmen.

No halting prose with unrelented rhythms can ever do justice to this noble theme; for in our youth these were the kindly djinns who built a palace on the edge of town and filled it with strange things for our delight.

In the gray dawn we saw the show arrive; saw it unload and watched the tents arise; then later viewed the mighty preparations for the grand, colossal, magnificent parade. (Alas, alack, that all these adjectives have in our later days gone Hollywood.)

There never was so gorgeous a parade. No ordinary mortals were in line. They all were creatures straight from fairyland. And some of them were friends of ours. They bade us carry water to the elephants and for our labors let us see the show.

Ah, sad it is that even djinns grow old and life may treat them hardly now and then. And so 'tis well that those more fortunate should make provision for the luckless ones.

And all who know their worth declare that no men have better right to comfort than the showmen.

A psychologist says the average intelligence of the human race is that of a 17-year-old. It's just as we've been suspecting for some time: People know too much for their own good.

The Boy Grows Up

The Spanish Issue Debated

Franco and Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with keen interest the letter in The Post of January 28, "For Recognition of Franco," by the distinguished Catholic executive and publicist, Mr. William F. Montavon. Some of the contentions therein advanced by Mr. Montavon are exceedingly arresting.

He says that he is "shocked" at The Post's statement that "the fall of Barcelona has settled the fate of republican Spain." His plain implication is that he regards Franco as the real representative of republican Spain.

In other words, Gen. Franco—according to Mr. Montavon—is the proponent and defender of free institutions and republican ideals. That is a news "beat" of the first magnitude.

The only fortunate thing is that Mr. Montavon has neglected to tell Franco about it. Franco, obviously, is not in the least aware that he is an exponent of freedom and republicanism. Franco—just "a plain blunt man"—goes right on declaiming and telling interviewers as he has done ever since July, 1936, about his detestation of, and contempt for, the evils of parliamentarism, and about his first determination to establish an authoritarian or totalitarian state, "of a corporative character," modeled "on the Italian system."

One of your correspondents, just the other day, cited quotation after quotation from statements and speeches by Franco himself, in which he explictly defined the nature of the dictatorship which he is setting up, on the Fascist pattern. It is needless to repeat those quotations here—or to add the numerous others which I have readily at hand.

The Spain that I knew was the Spain of Alfonso and of Primo de Rivera. I knew it rather well—from Barcelona to Madrid and down to Seville, from the Andalusian hill towns over to Badajoz and up to the Basque country. I liked the people immensely, and I loved the aspect of the land. But I could not help seeing what it meant for Spain to be utterly in the grip of medievalism, feudalism, obscurantism, greed, economic despotism, and the forces of black, incorrigible reaction—forces that now find in Franco their quintessential embodiment

I have stood in the glittering golden treasury of the Cathedral of Toledo, overpowered by the heaped-up, nonproductive wealth—and then have gone out in the brilliant Spanish sunlight and been confronted by the terrible poverty and wretchedness of the peasants on the high table-land of Castile. I have seen in Andalusia the hordes of the sleek and slothful—and I have seen the bent and racked and disease-ridden forms of pitiful old women in the remote villages of the Sierra Nevada.

So now the noble generalissimo who violated his solemn oath and betrayed the government that was paying his salary is going to bring "free institutions" to Spain. That's marvelous. In my collection of pictures, I'm reserving space for one large photograph of Francisco Franco bringing justice and republicanism to Spain. The historical significance of that picture will be absolutely unique. Nothing like it since Runnymede!

Thinks Democracy Weak

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The desire for recognition of the Franco group in Spain by our Government assuredly does not come from American-minded people but rather from the alien-minded owing primary allegiance to some totalitarian power. Sympathy for Franco is inspired by the wish to see the old order restored in Spain, under which the church, the aristocracy and the military would hold sway over the common people.

But indications point to a Mussolini-Hitler control of Spain, ultimately to extend and include both France and England. The position taken by Chamberlain toward the loyalist government of Spain, whereby the recent Franco victory was possible, has resulted in handing over Spain to the dictators. Futile efforts at "appeasement" may continue but the inevitable is bound to be realized ere long.

What effect this will have upon the world at large, and especially upon the United States, can best be conjectured. So-called democracies that stand by and see a democracy struggling for self-preservation and yet cruelly decline to go to its assistance can hardly be expected to do much to protect themselves.

JOHN A. OWENS.

Washington, Jan. 28.

Proof of Fairness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attitude of Charles A. Kerin in his letter, headed "Disgusted With The Post," in Friday's paper and the fair, impartial analysis by Dorothy Thompson on "Spain And The Catholics" in the same issue are in marked contrast.

Charles A. Kerin's splentic rage and demand: "I want news, not propaganda; truth, not half-truths; logic and common sense, not hysteria and nonsense" coupled with his threat to boycott The Post shows that Kerin's mind moves along the typical fascist groove.

I often disagree with The Post's editorials, as for example, the one objecting to Amlie's appointment to the ICC. But in all fairness, I admit the right of the editor to his conservative viewpoint while I reserve mine to differ with him in my liberal philosophy. I have subscribed to The Post for many years and find that with few exceptions its news is unbiased, its editorials conservative with an occasional tinge toward liberalism. The fact that it will print a fascistic diatribe is proof of The Post's bending backward in an effort to be fair.

If Kerwin would take the trouble to read Dorothy Thompson's article and other information on the Spanish situation, he would see that the so-called Spanish "civil war" is in reality a Nazi-Fascist invasion. He would see that the real welfare of Catholicism and Christianity is threatened by an Italian victory under Franco. He would also see that our Government by its embargo on shipments to loyalist Spain has directly aided the Fascist invasion.

To attribute the present increase in public sentiment for the removal of the Spanish embargo to Communists is the height of absurdity. This sentiment is due to America's traditional love for democracy and free speech.

ARISTOTLE.

Washington, Jan. 29.

"Newspapers Are Unfair"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attitude of The Post on the Spanish question has led one to wonder if the President may not be right when he says the newspapers are unfair. It ruffles me considerably to have to agree with Mr. Roosevelt on anything, but it looks as though he is correct on that.

I have been a teacher of history for a number of years, and European history is one of the lines in which I am especially interested. Looking at the question from that viewpoint, I can't see how any person who knows anything about it can advocate the United States helping either side.

Of course, the answer is that the vast majority know very little about the revolution in Spain and have no way of knowing except what they read in the papers and hear over the radio.

And the papers and radio support the view dictated by the publisher or sponsor, so the people have no real way of arriving at a sane understanding of any question.

It is a very serious argument against the people being allowed to vote in a war referendum. They can be stampeded so very easily!

M. STEWART.

Washington, Jan. 27.

Lift the Embargo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Spanish people have fought and will continue to fight for those democratic rights for which the colonists fought and won in 1776. American citizens should not stand paralyzed while fascism marches on. The fight against fascism in Spain is our fight. Our failure to support the loyalist government endangers our own freedom.

Under the terms of the neutrality act the present Spanish embargo was brought into being by Presidential proclamation. This embargo was "supposed" to prohibit the sale of arms to either the Spanish government or the forces under Franco. While the embargo denied the sale of arms to the Spanish government, it did not deny the sale of war materials to Germany and Italy. As a consequence these dictatorial governments are permitted to buy munitions of war and turn them over to the rebel forces in Spain.

That the embargo is not a peace measure is self-evident. Its proclamation was welcomed only by Hitler, Mussolini, Franco, and Nazi and Fascist sympathizers throughout the world. The embargo should be lifted now, while democracy in Spain still lives. The exercise of the legal right to ship arms to Spain did not involve Mexico in war. If this dictatorship coalition has failed to attack the weaker Mexico for helping Spain, it is not logical to presume that it will attack the United States if the embargo is lifted. On the other hand, it will inspire and encourage the forces of democracy throughout the world.

Failure to lift the embargo will establish the suicidal precedent of penalizing a recognized government attacked by traitors both from within and from without. When the government of Brazil was faced by an insurrection a few years ago shipment of arms was authorized by the U. S. Government to the Brazilian government. At the same time the rebel forces were expressly forbidden such aid by Presidential proclamation. Under a parallel situation, this should be the policy of our Government today.

In every known instance up to the present, the United States has aided the recognized government of a country and denied such aid to rebellious factions. This is no time to deviate from the traditional policy of our Government. In doing so we are playing directly into the hands of ruthless dictators and stabbing in the back the legal government recognized by the United States.

The overwhelming majority of the American people are in favor of lifting the embargo. Their voice should be obeyed. The real danger to the peace of the United States, lies not in lifting the embargo but in maintaining it.

A Religious War?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all the excitement over the Spanish problem? It is my opinion we are watching a religious war and not a fascist or democracy struggle. And I believe if you knew each commentator's religion you would find my views correct.

In Spain it is quite natural that such conditions should exist. The people and country have been dominated by the Catholic Church from time immemorial. The people at last rebelled, only to find Franco, with Mussolini's backing, cramming it down their necks. Mexico, a child of Spain, had its church trouble. Let us keep out of wars, if possible, but also keep America safe for freedom of worship, or no worship if one chooses.

Georgetown Nicknames

CLEVER ARCHITECTS have turned back the clock in Georgetown, restoring this old house and that one. But the city planners, or the powers that be, have yet seen fit to bring back the original names to certain areas that were familiar to Georgetownians 40 or 50 years ago, thus place names that are, in many cases, picturesque or amusing, are entirely lost to the consciousness of the present-day inhabitants.

In Georgetown, as in many other small towns, these terms, gradually evolved, were accepted as a matter of course by its citizens and were in constant use half a century ago. Everyone then knew where "Holy Hill" was, how to reach "Herring Hill," where "Cook Park" was located and in what corner one could find "Swampoodle," though to give the exact topographical outline of these places might have been a trifle difficult then and is admittedly so now. However, on the minds of us whose earliest recollections are connected with the town these places and their quaint names are indelibly imprinted.

"Red Lane," or Lovers Lane," is the unpaved road which now separates the Woods Bliss place, the Oaks, from Montrose Park. Its shady path in bygone years invited young Sunday-school picnickers to follow down the hill to Morton's Woods which lay at its foot.

"Twenty Builudings" was a block that nice little boys and girls were supposed to stay away from in the 1880's and 90's. It, nevertheless, or, maybe, all the more, allured, for there one always saw groups of happy Negro children playing hopscotch on the unpaved sidewalk, while woolly headed mothers, leaning from upstairs windows, gossiped with their neighbors. This row of two-storied brick houses, 20 in all, stood originally on the north side of Q street, just west of Wisconsin avenue.

On "Holy Hill" there was Georgetown University, with its gray stone buildings towering above the Potomac River; there was Trinity Church, near by, also a Catholic institution, and the famous old Convent of the Visitation, one of the oldest in the United States, with its walled-in garden hidden from the public eye. Since each of these pieces of ecclesiastical property covered an extensive area, "Holy Hill" was the largest section of the town to bear a local name. It occupied the then extreme northwestern part.

In quite the other direction was "Herring Hill," a district bordered approximately by N street on its south side, Dumbarton avenue on its north, Twenty-seventh street east and Twenty-ninth street west. Fifty years ago this was a strictly colored neighborhood, having gained its name from the chief item of diet of its population, who peddled fish on the street, singing as they went:

"Herrin', herrin',
Two for a penny.
Ain't yer 'shamed
To eat so many?"

South of "Herring Hill" was "Swampoodle," that verged on the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, on Water street and, as its name implies, had a decidedly watery atmosphere.

"Cook Park," the exact antithesis of a park, was a locality much loved by neighborhood boys, who called themselves "Cook Park Gang" and played hare and hounds there as regularly as spring came around. It occupied the part of the town where now Cambridge place, Dent place and Irving place extend from Thirtieth street on the east to Avon place on the west. The name was probably given because of its proximity to Cook Row, a group of six unattached houses, still intact and unaltered, on Q street.

The easternmost one of these dwellings was the home of Gov. Henry Cook before the days of Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Calling the site north of this row a park was truly an act of courtesy. It was merely an unimproved area; in reality, a wild jungle, with unhampered growth of honeysuckle vines, fallen locust trees, prickly jimson weeds, together with many tall ailanthus trees giving giving out their rank odor on warm spring evenings.

In the center of this "park," hidden from all but prying eyes, were the crumbling brick foundation walls of a house, quite large, which, rumor said, had once been the French Legation, which had caught fire and burned down shortly after the Civil War.

"Cemetery Hill," close by, was the popular coasting place for sledders in winter. It was then known as Washington street, now Thirtieth, and was the long stretch from Oak Hill Cemetery entrance to the P street (or West street) car line, as it was then.

Up to 1915 the present headquarters of the Society of Colonial Dames, originally called Bellevue but now known as Dumbarton House, stood at a different angle from what it does today. Formerly it faced west, terminating Q street at Twenty-eighth street, for Q street had not then been cut through, nor the buffalo-guarded bridge built over Rock Creek.

Before the changed position of this house it was owned and occupied by the Rittenhouse family and presided over for many years by a spinster member, Miss Lulie, who allowed her small nephew "Chick" to use her garden and the entire area behind her home for a playground for his large circle of boy friends. Thus this section came to be known as "Chick Rittenhouse's Aunt Lulie's back lot," not alone by the band of youngsters who played there, but by most of the children of the town.

Incidentally, the apartment house, Kew Gardens, now stands on "Chick Rittenhouse's Aunt Lulie's back lot."

No bronze tablets mark these historic sites. No guidebooks to Georgetown, no biographies of its citizens mention these funny old names. Yet there they were, terms that were on every lip, as much a part of the town's life in 1890 and on as the iron gates of the cemetery, or the oaks of Montrose Park. Today, however, the city planners, as well as the real estate men, prefer that this terminology should join "the limbo of forgotten things," as very probably it soon will.

Outstanding Commentators On Current Events At Home And Abroad

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

'Prejudical' Writers

SIDNEY WHIPPLE, the World-Telegram's play reviewer, complains that most columnists, being, so he says, special pleaders, don't dare step out of character and review a play objectively, but carry prejudice into the theater and judge the plays of which they write by political rather than artistic standards. In using the term "most columnists" he has blown himself a smoke ring and is trying to do tricks on it, because "most columnists" seldom write about current shows.

But if he will put it that radicals of both extremes, left and right, are alike in their intolerance and brattish nastiness when crossed, I will go along with him. The temper of which he speaks is apparent not only in comments on plays but in reviews of books and discussions of political persons and it takes very little reading in the communist press to discover that there is Goebbles blood in all bigots.

THE NAZI MINISTER of public enlightenment would forbid a play offensive to his principles on the ground of untruth and his conception of the national interest, and we have groups in this country who would do the same, although there are no writers of any prominence who speak for the extreme right. But we do have writers on the far left in both the communist and standard American press who share the Nazi belief that the first test should be whether the play, book, or speech conforms to the party line at whatever damage to art, truth or freedom.

This is not strange, considering that fascism was copied from communism by a renegade and that Nazism is hopped-up fascism. Neither is it surprising that writings which please or even present without feeling familiar American sentiments and neglect to flog Nazi-Fascist opponents of the great Russian experiment in human betterment are treated with scorn by critics impatient for the day when the same experiment will be tried here.

SIDNEY SHOULD have remembered the reactions of the communists and their fellow travelers to the early operations of the Dies Committee. This committee showed great promise at first when it was poking around in the affairs of world Nazism, but as soon as it turned to similar operations by the communist conspiracy it was denounced as an enemy of American liberty and a tool of the fascists.

The communists were aroused to great fury by a backslid fellow traveler who revealed the facts, previously spotted and angrily denied, that the cry of "red-baiting" was a protective device used to impose on the honest liberal sentiments of the majority of Americans. This cry of "red-baiting," he said, was the best trick ever invented for making short work of anybody who dared object to communist theories or practices.

IT PROTECTED and facilitated the work of Moscow, whereas the Nazi-Fascists, using communistic methods in their own attempt to create their own united front, were pegged as reactionaries and couldn't arouse much useful sympathy by a cry of "reactionary baiting."

It goes without saying that neither a communist nor a fascist would enjoy or approve a play or book dealing pleasantly with the familiar and cherished institutions, memories and habits of the American Nation. The radical press of both extremes has no patience with those who believe in the American form of government, and any work which indicates an acceptance of that form is condemned in advance for reasons having nothing to do with fidelity to the scene or the merits of the writing. In a conspicuous case Miss Irene Kuhn's book, "Assigned to Adventure," was savagely condemned on the ground that her political beliefs disqualified her.

BUT ANY WORK depicting the United States as a land of squalor and the home of the exploited would be given respectful, probably very sympathetic, treatment, and the most praiseworthy note in the play "Abraham Lincoln in Illinois" in the ears of the communists is that in which Lincoln observes that the people have the right to change their form of government at any time. Thus Lincoln is discovered as an advocate of violent revolution, directed from Moscow, firing squads, the deportation of the American farmer to some American Siberia at the order of the commissar in Washington, and the massacre of those who own their homes or wish they could.

All communist and Nazi-Fascist reviews of books, plays, legislative proposals and speeches are determined in advance, like the verdicts of Russian, German and Italian courts, but I think Sidney will allow that few commentators in the standard American press are devoted to either extreme.

Symbolic Vote

By Ernest K. Lindley

Neat Political Formula

BOTH HOUSES of Congress have cast a symbolic vote for economy at the expense of the needy unemployed. The $150,000,000 cut in the WPA deficiency bill was not based on any revision of Federal relief policy or of any calculation of probable need under existing policy. It was just a cut.

In support of the cut Senator Adams of Colorado avowed belief that during the next five months 4,000,000 persons will be reabsorbed in private employment. That is a fantastically optimistic forecast. The President's request for $875,000,000 was based on the most optimistic estimates made by economists in the Government: that 1,500,000 more persons would be employed in private industry in June than in December.

The uneasiness which some Senators felt about supporting the cut was reflected in the debate. Senator Adams himself said that it "will not make a particle of difference to any man, woman or child in America whether we vote for $875,000,000 or $725,000,000, because the Congress will not permit the people to suffer from cold or hunger."

THAT UNEASINESS was shown even more clearly in the provision prohibiting WPA from reducing its rolls by more than 5 per cent during February and March and inviting the President to ask for more money to finish the fiscal year if it should prove to be needed.

As a political formula this is neat. It permits a vote for economy to be coupled with a semblance of solicitude for the needy unemployed.

The President could courteously cooperate in pretending that this formula is sensible and workable. Or he could expose its rather fraudulent nature. Or, to put the latter alternative more politely, he could answer at once the invitation to ask for more money if it should be needed.

By prohibiting WPA from reducing its rolls by more than 5 per cent during February and March, the Senate ostensibly recognized the greatness of the present need. WPA now has on its rolls a few less than 3,000,000 persons. In addition, there is a backlog of more than 750,000 or more persons who have been certified as eligible for WPA but who have not been given jobs.

UNLESS COMPELLED to do so, WPA certainly would not reduce its rolls much, if any, below 3,000,000 during February and March. At the average cost of $61 per person per month, about $366,000 would be required to carry 3,000,000 persons through those two months. Approximately $360,000,000 of the $725,000,000 would be left for April, May and June. This could be parceled out in several different ways. The rolls could be kept at 3,000,000 in April, cut to 2,000,000 in May, and then to 1,000,000 in June.

Or the cutting could be begun about April 1, so that during April there would be an average of only 2,500,000 on the rolls. There would then remain enough to employ 1,750,000 workers during the months of May and June—or about 1,400,000 fewer than in December. If WPA were certain that it had to make $725,000,000 last until July 1, it probably would taper off in about this way.

There is no way of knowing exactly how many WPA workers will be absorbed in private employment during April until April arrives. By then, it would be too late to ask Congress for more money. In April, there will be no exact way of knowing how many WPA workers would be absorbed by private employment in May and June.

CONGRESS HAS TAKEN about four weeks to respond to the President's request of January 5 for a WPA deficiency appropriation. For anything approaching decent administration, WPA should know at least three weeks or a month in advance how much money it will have to spend during the following month. In fact, if WPA is to be tightened up, if poor projects are to be eliminated, the State administrators should be able to make their plans two or three months in advance.

Thus by the first week in March, WPA ought to know how much money it can spend in April. And how much it should spend in April depends, in turn, on how much it will have left for May and June.

The President ought to renew at once his request for another $150,000,000 to carry WPA through June 30. It is hardly conceivable that there will be enough of an economic spurt between now and mid-May to restore 1,400,000 WPA workers to private jobs—not to mention the backlog of 750,000 to 1,000,000 needy unemployed on the WPA waiting list.

If, as Senator Adams asserted, Congress "will not permit the people to suffer from cold and hunger," it might as well start now on a second deficiency appropriation bill. It is as clear now as it will be two months hence that unless a miracle occurs, WPA will need that additional $150,000,000.

On The Record

The Hitler Speech

WHENEVER HITLER moderates his voice and delivers a speech in a tone to which civilized ears are accustomed, the world breathes a sigh of relief and is inclined to praise him.

Thus, Mr. Chamberlain finds that the Monday speech was not one calculated to throw the world into war, and Senator Key Pittman suggests that if Hitler's future actions are as tolerant as his Reichstag speech there will be no fear of any immediate war.

As a matter of fact, Hitler never delivered a more ominous speech or one more cunningly calculated to befuddle his opponents and create dissension in democracies.

The speech boils down to a declaration of intention to reapportion the tribution of the world's wealth among nations. He declared, his complete solidarity with Italy, and, in effect, handed Mussolini a blank check.

HE ANNOUNCED a more intensive trade and propaganda war on the democracies.

He appealed to the masses of the world to unite in a common front against their universal enemy, the Jews, whom he managed at one and the same time to associate with international finance, capitalism and with Bolshevism.

And his argument was that any attempt to halt the inevitable expansion of Germany, Italy and Japan, which he clearly associated ideologically with Fascism and National Socialism, might precipitate a war, and that in that case the defenders would be the aggressors and bear the burden of the war guilt!

Hitler's intention is to put anybody who opposes the extension of fascism and the aggrandizement of the fascist nations in the position of being a war mongerer. He, therefore, plays upon the overwhelming desire for peace of civilized people and exploits one of the noblest yearnings of mankind for the uses of a completely militarized social order.

HITLER'S WHOLE program follows a pattern. He is now pursuing on a world scale exactly the political technique with which he conquered Germany.

Recognizing that there is an aggressive instinct in man, he seeks to deflect that instinct in a direction where it will do him no possible harm.

Just as inside Germany he managed to persuade the German people that the source of all their troubles was the 1 per cent of the Jewish population, so he seeks to convince Great Britain, for instance, or France, that they are not endangered by 10,000 German airplanes, by the 19 airports and five submarine bases that the Germans have built in nationalist Spain, but that their real enemies are within their own gates and are Jewish.

He deflects attention from himself, from Mussolini and from the great aggressive military machine of Japan, to the 15,000,000 people of many nationalities scattered throughout the earth, picturing them as part of some gigantic plot whose aim is world Bolshevism.

And with this technique he hopes to create civil strife in the democracies, to confuse issues, to awaken distrust, and thus to weaken the nations at whose expense he intends to profit.

THE MIND of Adolf Hitler is a peculiar thing. It would be psychologically interesting to know whether he really believes what he says and is himself a victim of huge obsessions, or whether the fantastic distortions of history and of facts which he voices are coldly and cunningly devised for a precise effect. His speech on Monday contained some patent, but mostly irrelevant, truths and some gigantic lies.

This column certainly would not quarrel with his ironic description of the Versailles policy toward Germany—with the idiocy of fighting a war for trade and then exacting huge reparations which could only be paid by an artificial acceleration of German exports. But the Versailles policy is all water under bridges and has no pertinence to the present state of affairs. When Hitler comes to more recent history his descriptions are breath-taking in their monstrous misrepresentation.

One need only take his description of the conquest of Austria, which he presents as an act of self-determination! He describes Chancellor Schuschnigg's plebiscite as the "destruction of the legal basis of the national right of self-determination" of Austrian Germans.

HE MAKES NO reference to his own plebiscite, conducted in Austria under an army of occupation, by which he destroyed the legal existence of Austria!

Defending the right of self-determination, he makes no reference to the million Czechs who have been forced under German rule in the last few months by a military coup d'etat.

His decription of German trade policies, as compared with those of states "with an international capitalistic outlook," is way afoul of the facts. He accuses these capitalistic states of juggling their currencies, making no reference to the fact that there are at present at least 11 different forms of reichsmark with 11 different values, all of them arbitrarily fixed.

All through the speech there is evidence of the paranoiac persecution mania under which Hitler, as the apotheosis of Germany, continually suffers. Whatever ills Germany endures are exclusively the fault of the rest of the world.

NO ACT OF consideration or kindness or even of reason has ever been shown for Germany since 1914.

He refers to the German children who died of hunger and undernourishment at the close of the war. He makes no reference to the fact that American Quakers, and others, using the voluntary gifts of hundreds of thousands of humanitarian Americans, fed a million German children in the very period to which he refers.

He scoffs at the democracies' solicitude for persecuted Jews, deriding us for not immediately moving to our own shores several hundred thousand German-speaking German citizens.

He makes no mention of the fact that Mr. George Rublee is in Berlin at this moment trying to negotiate some way in which the people of the democracies at considerable cost to themselves can save these human lives.

Nor does he mention the fact that the same American Quakers who once fed German children are feeding destitute Jewish German citizens inside Germany at this moment.

While claiming that he does not want to intervene in any way in American affairs, he suggests that it is our business radically to reform our immigration laws in order to relieve him of a self-made problem, and if we do not do so, we are inhumanitarian.

HE DENOUNCES Bolshevism. But—and this is very significant—he does not say a word about Russia. One can only gather from his speech that the Bolshevik countries today are the democracies and that communism and democracy are one and the same thing.

At the same time he attacks bourgeois society, and his speech presages the establishment of complete military communism in Germany. He announces that trade, industry and finance will be even more closely concentrated than they are at present under the German state, and that the Reichsbank is to be transformed into a purely German bank of issue.

"If need be we will place all the production resources of our new National Socialist community at the disposal of its leaders," can only mean the complete socialization of all the means of production.

His statements regarding the treatment of religion are not true. His categorical remark that "National Socialism has neither interfered with the doctrinal teaching nor with the creed of any denomination" is not in agreement with the expressed convictions of the Pope, nor with the Confessional Synod of the Evangelical Church, nor with a most remarkable document issued by the chaplains of the German army some months ago.

THERE IS A very serious doctrinal conflict between National Socialism and Christianity on the racial question, on marriage and on the teaching of youth.

Again he completely distorts the reasons for the S. A. purge of 1934.

He asserts that Capt. Roehm and other Nazi Party leaders were shot because they were found guilty of pederasty and sexual offenses against children. Capt. Roehm was a notorious pederast. He was a notorious pederast when Mr. Hitler made him head of the S. A. and the organizer of German Youth.

If Hitler did not know that, then he was the most unknowledgable person in Germany.

Roehm was shot for political reasons. And it is for political and religious reasons that out of 18,000 Protestant pastors 1,300 have been under prison or police arrest since 1934, and that more than 8,000 Catholic religious leaders have been smeared with charges of immorality although even in Nazi courts only 49 have ever been convicted.

IT IS NOT TRUE that Germany refrains from any intervention in American affairs.

German agents have organized groups in the United States and the Nazi Party is sending masses of anti-Semitic propaganda into this country, aimed at stirring up internal dissension.

Nazi Germany maintains offices for the purpose of persuading German-Americans that their first loyalty is to Germany, and not to this country.

The answer to Hitler's charges of gigantic Jewish propaganda is in the morning papers. The New York Times devotes two full pages to the official German translation of the text of Hitler's speech. The Herald Tribune devotes an entire page to it. One of the two great radio networks of this country carried Hitler's speech in its entirety. Do the German newspapers carry uncensored texts of President Roosevelt's speeches? Do the German radio stations transmit them to the German people, uncensored, over the air?

They do not.

It is noteworthy that the speech makes no reference whatsoever to the recently concluded nonaggression agreement with the French, while giving free hand to Mussolini.

One can only conclude that if Mussolini moves against Tunisia Hitler will give him aid, either by harassing Britain, or, in the manner of Italian and German intervention in Spain, will agree to nonintervention while sending arms and technical assistants to Mussolini.

Beware of the Greeks bearing gifts! Beware of Adolf Hitler preaching peace.

Accuses Republican Regime

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I submit a few facts about the origin of the present struggle in Spain?

In January, 1936, the Lerroux government was in power—the same Lerroux who has rightly been called the father of modern Spanish republicanism. He was supported by a cabinet predominantly composed of members of his own party. Then came the elections of February, 1936—the elections which were to usher into Spain the reign of terror. The first returns showed that the center-right alliance would still have a majority in the Cortes, though decreased. This was conceded and published even in American papers. Hence the popular front was not elected "by an overwhelming majority;" the majority was on the other side.

The general elections were on February 1; the supplementary on February 15. On February 1, when they saw the tide running against them, the elements of disorder took to terrorizing the population, even at the polls. According to law, Lerroux's government (the government which presided at the elections) should have remained in office until Parliament assembled in about a month. The mobs taking control, the government was forced to resign. Then the program prearranged at Moscow came into being. Things were not quite ready, so the Marxists hid behind the smoke-screen of the so-called republicans. Azana had to form the government.

The next sin against democracy was committed when this government made of the elections of February 15, and we use the word "made" in its full significance. The desired candidates were returned. The elections of February 1 were declared not free, and in many places new elections were made, and Left candidates substituted for the formerly victorious Right-Center.

No thought of resorting to violence was suggested by the law-abiding elements at this time. Then came the dawn! Before a month had passed, the usurping government had forfeited all right to respect and obedience it might have had. The killings and burnings and destroying came on in earnest. Police had strict orders not to interfere with the "celebrations in the streets."

The Russian Ambassador began to sit in at the cabinet meetings in Valencia, and his approval was made to supply for the president's signature. The Reds shackled the Spanish press completely. No one knew what was taking place in Spain, except in his or her own small locality. But Gil Robles knew and he told the Cortes. The list of "democratic" blessings embraced hundreds of murders, strikes, destruction of churches, political clubs, newspaper offices, robberies. And there was still a month to run before the army rose. Calvo Sotelo made his revelation, and as a reward was made a bright, shining example of another of Russia's "democratic" liberties, the liberty of free speech. He was murdered.

The founders of democracy in Spain were treated rather roughly. Zamorra went into hiding; Maura, home minister in the first republican cabinet, likewise went into hiding; Lerroux disappeared. Unamuno, who recently died, a refugee, said of Franco's rising that it was a war to save western civilization.

In Spain there was a daily continuous revolt against all government. The Madrid government never met the challenge. None of the criminals were brought to justice. If a government is to govern, then this was no government. If a government is to protect lives and property, this was no government. A government that shrinks from its duties, or willingly forfeits these duties, has abdicated. The right and the duty then devolved upon the citizens of establishing a government. CLARENCE DUHART.

Trial Before Hanging

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson's assumptions are built on the shifting sands of supposition and propaganda. Fundamentally, her entire article is an outgrowth of superficial phraseology, to wit: "It was announced this week that the Hitler government of Germany has concluded a 'cultural' treaty with Franco Spain."

Most of us are now completely convinced that the loyalists were communists and just as serious a menace to democracy and Christianity as Hitler's government. Most of us realize that Hitler is persecuting both Catholics and Jews. Most of us should know that the Pope will not admonish Hitler and tolerate Franco for the same sin, religious persecution. The Pope is a minister of morality, not public opinion.

And most of us are certainly astute enough to reason that Franco, a Catholic from birth, a supporter of Christianity to this present day, is not likely suddenly to turn his back upon all his principles and reject the very cause he has fought for, suffered for, sacrificed his men, spent his ammunition and dedicated his life for—Christianity. Yes, "it was announced" that the end of the world had come several times, but it has not come yet. We can think for ourselves, Dorothy, and we believe in giving everyone a trial before hanging him.

It is unfortunate Franco did not adopt democracy, but it is fortunate for Christianity he defeated Popular Front democracy.

A Fighting Chance

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of January 27, entitled "The Fall of Barcelona," must provoke the unfavorable criticism of every person who has desired to see the lifting of the Spanish embargo.

You say that the question confronting us now is not one concerning the embargo, but rather a question of whether or not we shall recognize Franco.

I submit for the consideration of your readers that the heroic Spanish people are not yet defeated, that they have not yet laid down what arms they have, that one-fourth of Spain's population, including Madrid and Valencia, is still under loyalist control, and that the Spanish people, by their courageous action to date, have proved to the world that so long as one square mile of loyalist territory remains, the republic has a fighting chance to repudiate its Fascist invaders.

I further submit that we in America, who see in the Spanish republic a bulwark of world democracy, must continue our efforts to lift the embargo. If given the opportunity to resist bullet for bullet, and bomb for bomb, the republic may yet lift its proud democratic head in victory.

PHLIP SHINBERG.

Principles Betrayed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express my appreciation of your fine editorial of January 25 urging the lifting of the Spanish embargo. You explained clearly and forcibly a subject on which a section of the public has been tragically misled.

It has been shocking to see how this "liberal" Administration, yielding to a minority pressure-group, has betrayed the principles of international law, of our traditional policy, and of our immediate national interest. I hope that on this issue, which cuts across party lines, you will continue to speak frankly. In so doing you are voicing the opinion, officially ignored, of the vast majority of Americans.

Gold Plate Breakfast Climaxes Capital Festivities

Martha Raye Takes Hollywood Contest Over Claudette Colbert And Marlene Dietrich

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHO DO YOU suppose won a recent contest for the loveliest legs in all Hollywood? Martha Raye! And who do you think were the runners-up? Claudette Colbert and Marlene Dietrich!

This is the first time that Miss Raye's legs have been brought to popular attention, but on second glance the omission seems like the most inexcusable kind of neglect. The singing comedienne has beautiful legs.

It would be quite a task to select one pair of perfect legs as the most beautiful in Hollywood, but it is no job at all to understand how these three particular stars happen to rate so highly. At various stages of their careers, each of them has done her share of dancing . . . and a better leg developing exercise has yet to be invented.

Took Dancing Lessons

Actresses usually take dancing lessons as part of their equipment for a career . . . but when most of us were young, it was the fashion to take piano lessons. Maybe that is the reason perfect legs, which seem to be the rule among actresses, are so rare among the average run of women.

Dancing, rope skipping, pedaling a bike, and special exercises which contract the calf muscles will all help to develop lovely contours in a pair of too thin legs. Exercise does not make thin legs thinner. The improvement in musculature helps to normalize the contour and give the legs a better shape even when no weight is added. The too thin girl, however, may have to put on a few pounds in order to fill her legs out satisfactorily.

Those contracting exercises are wrong for legs that are already overdeveloped. The area from the ankle to knee is the hardest part of the figure to reduce when it has been thickened by either muscular development or the deposit of flabby fat. But if the muscles are bunchy, stretching exercises and massage are the antidote.

Walk Barefoot on Heels

One of the most effective exercises for slimming thick legs is to walk, barefoot, on the heels, toes pulled up toward the instep. You can feel the pull on the calf muscles.

An appreciable improvement can be made in thick ankles by this exercise: Lie on the back on the floor, the left knee flexed and foot on the floor, the right leg straight out in the air but resting on the left knee. Slowly rotate the right foot at the ankle ten times, then change to the other foot.

Massage has a stanch following and has been used extensively for slimming muscularly overdeveloped legs. Some of the experts advise that massage be taken with the legs held up to reverse the flow of blood. You can give yourself the treatment: Begin by slitting up, legs straight out in front, hands clasped about one ankle. Slowly lower the trunk backward until you are in a prone position. As you do so, move the hands up the leg in long, firm strokes. Both massage and stretching exercise make a great improvement in flabby legs.

Propping the feet up on pillows, by the way, is one of the quickest ways of relieving congestion in the ankles and feet caused by too much standing.

Learn to Budget Your Income

THAT DREAM of giving your children opportunities! It's a dream the Brents thought they'd never realize until a budget plan showed them how.

By stopping leaks and pulling expenses into line, they now can send Bud to camp, give Sister music lessons. Already they're saving for the youngsters' college education.

Amazing what you can do when you spend your money by plan instead of chance.

Lots of bookkeeping? No. Just divide the family income into six parts: Shelter, Food, Operating Expenses, Clothing, Advancement, Savings.

How much to give to each part depends a lot on your desires. If you want education advantages, your Advancement Fund will take more of your income than the usual 14 per cent. Simple to squeeze the money from other items.

There's rent. On a budget plan, you count carfare along with rent and when you add those two items together you may find your rent's high. Save by moving close to school and business.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Budget Your Income," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Happily Situated Woman Feels Conscience Driven To Do 'Something for Others;' How Proceed?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a regular reader of your column, I am appealing to you to put me in touch with such organizations or individuals as could direct me in making worthwhile use of my leisure time. I live in the Cleveland Park area and feel that I live too selfish and aimless an existence, and that I would be happier in spending some time in the service of those less fortunately situated. I have thought of reading to shut-ins, of doing clerical work or of driving persons without means of transportation to doctors' offices or to clinics for treatment.

My children are grown and away and although I never find time hanging heavy on my hands, and am kept busy with my own social duties and amusements, nevertheless my conscience bothers me and I would like to do something helpful for others. I shall watch your column and hope that you can supply the constructive suggestion.

B. R. J.

DEAR B. R. J.: Until this year, the Council of Social Agencies, at 1101 M street northwest, was equipped with a Volunteer Service Bureau which functioned as a recruiting and assignment center, in making good use of the social equipment of such altruistic persons as yourself. However, it is my understanding that this bureau has now been discontinued, for lack of maintenance funds, although the council is continuing to try, even so, to meet the problem of bringing the needy and the would-be helpful together.

It has been suggested (to me) that you get in touch with Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, telephone MEtropolitan 2284, and make a direct offer of your services to her. She, if anybody, will know how to "direct (you) in making a worthwhile use of (your) leisure time." This suggestion, by the way, does not come from Mrs. Roberts herself, but from an agency associate. I am convinced there is much work to be done, of a volunteer kind, along the lines you have in mind, and you are to be complimented on having the will to seek it out and to do your part of it. M. H.

Seeks Writing Success

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young girl who believes she would be a success as a writer of plays, essays, satires and novels. At present, I am in my senior year at high school, and look forward to graduation in June. However, I have not as yet had any opportunity to test my writing abilities.

Do you or your readers know of any such opportunities, offered in Washington, by contests or other means, to boys and girls who aspire to become professional writers, and who believe they could achieve success in that field? Thank you in advance for any information which you or your readers may be able to give me. Sincerely yours, AMBITIOUS.

Specialist's Suggestions

DEAR AMBITIOUS: During the time I have been conducting this column, there has never come to my attention any local enterprise dedicated to the proposition of discovering or disinterestedly encouraging youthful writing talent. I have just discussed your question with a man who conducts adult classes in short story writing and he tells me that if there are any such projects, he, too, is in ignorance of them.

However, he mentions the fact that "a number of writers' magazines of general circulation do occasionally announce manuscript contests being conducted by various publications—although usually," he adds, "they are not open to children; or, better say, high school students." He has known, too, of contests which apparently were launched for the purpose of calling the majority of entrants' attention to the existence of certain courses of instruction in writing, he says; explaining that, "those whose manuscripts were rejected in some instances received follow-up literature calling attention to these courses." Thus, while such contests are legitimate tests of talent, affording recognition to the person of outstanding merit, he thinks they are scarcely the opportunity you are looking for.

He suggests that you improve what talent you have by getting "the best possible foundation in English;" that you "consult your teachers in compiling a list of books that will be helpful in throwing light on the fundamentals of short story, novel, essay and play construction;" and that, finally, you contact him (if you like), armed with a note of introduction from this columnist—for the purpose of having your writings, to date, "competently criticized free of charge." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Women's Page.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 31.

A LOT OF ill-natured fun has been poked at lady athletes in recent years, and some of it has been justified. Certainly not even the most ardent admirer of our sex enjoys beholding a wild-eyed, flying-haired, knotty-legged girl going over the hurdles or putting the shot—no matter how far she puts it.

ALICE HUGHES

But if we view figure-skating as a sport and not a theatrical exposition, then no one can withhold admiration and praise from little Henie and her followers. And where will you see a prettier sight than Alice Marble on the tennis court? Some smart-aleck sports writers have just gone a leetle mite too far, that's all. And the other day I went to the biggest annual foils competition here, and I have seldom seen anything to beat the grace and beauty of the agile girls trying to pink their adversaries with the little rapier.

An astonishingly graceful girl named Barbara Cochrane thrilled all beholders by winning 13 straight victories in sweeping through a field of 34 topnotch fencers. It was a beautiful sight to see Barbara lunging and parrying her way to victory. I'm glad I didn't miss this exhibition, for it proved to me all over again that not all lady athletes are lumpy, weedy and stringy. Some are marvels of beauty and grace in motion.

Of course, the wise-cracking sports writers won't let me get away with this. "Nuts!" they'll remark with their usual elegance. "That's not sport—that's just a show, like figure skating." Well, the back of my hand to them!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Just to cling to that sports thing a moment, do you realize that Sonja Henie pays $35 a pair for those very sheer pale beige tights she wears in her ice show—and that she's lucky if she can wear a pair three times? They are made especially for her—and the tax bloodhounds may as well get ready to pass a large item for tights-expense, come next March.

There's a rumor here in town that Ginger Rogers is resting up at a milk farm somewhere in this area. The girl is said to have been worn to a frazzle making her newest picture, "The Castles," with Freddy Astaire, the Omaha wonder-boy.

I was shocked and horrified at the terrible accident which befell our lovely dark-haired actress, Erin O'Brien-Moore, the other night. Maybe you heard that a cigarette set fire to her pink net dress while she was at a restaurant table. Glad to report that she's better, and will not be badly scarred. Erin is married to one of the nicest newspapermen in our town, Mark Barron, of the Associated Press.

Wonder if it is true that Helen Willis Moody is going to make a movie? It is so reported, here and there. Well, the camera will have no difficulty in catching that static Grecian beauty.

And have you heard about the 300-pound lady who will be on show at our World's Fair? No, not on the Midway! This one is cast in solid crystal—the largest single piece extant—and she has just been turned out up at Corning, N. Y.

I hear that Mary Pickford, now the big cosmetic woman, will become a legal resident of our town in the spring, after so many years of California-dwelling. Leading our town's best-seller parade, as of today, are "All This and Heaven, Too," the novel, and Peggy Halsey's "With Malice Toward Some," in nonfiction. The best book I read in January was "This Was a Bet," Prof. Whicher's brilliant work about Emily Dickinson. I can safely say, "This is a book."

Toni Frissell, the clever fashion photographer, has knocked the town for a loop with her new pictures of what they're wearing in Hawaii. Most interesting is an evening fashion called the "holoku," said to be derived from the Mother Hubbard affairs which shocked missionaries put on the unadorned native women in the old days. Mother Hubbard to "holoku" to Fifth avenue—what a mad course fashion takes, sometimes!

Cover and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees F., for about 1¾ hours, or until vegetables are tender. Children Growing Taller and Larger

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The coming generation seems to be growing taller and larger than its parents. Whether this is due to better care and the improvement in pediatric knowledge or is due to the workings of natural selection is debatable.

Certainly there is no question about the improved quality of the science of pediatrics, which has to do with the hygiene and care of infants and children. The striking and dramatic example of this is the case of the quintuplets. Never before in the history of the world has a set of quintuplets been raised to childhood, but then never before in the history of the world has our knowledge of how to feed and care for infants been so complete.

Certainly this thought suggests itself on considering the reports of the changed tables of height and weight in an unselected group of children, brought up in the modern manner. No institutionalization took place as was the case with the quintuplets. The supervision was carried out at home and consisted of examination by the doctor twice a month up to 3 months, once a month until the end of the first year, every 3 months to two years, and twice a year until the age of 5.

This, of course, meant that advice as to diet, clothing, bathing and preventive immunization was given by competent doctors and carried out by intelligent parents.

Specifically, in detail the diet came up to a few simple requirements. It was ample in caloric requirements. There was plenty of milk and eggs during the early months and meat and liver after the half-year period. In other words, a high protein diet. The fluid intake was low, and the amount of solid food high. Emphasis was on solids rather than milk after the first year. The sugar intake was fairly low, so was the fat, but the vitamin content—orange juice, cod liver oil, rice, etc.—was high.

The child was always encouraged to "grow up" as regards eating.

Stripped sun baths were given daily in summer and alpine lights in winter.

The results show that at the end of 60 months these children are on the average nearly half an inch taller and four pounds heavier than the tables heretofore used for averages would indicate.

Venetian Silks Blanket Paris

Paris (AP).—France and Italy may be making faces at each other in a diplomatic way, but Paris and Venice are just like that when it comes to spring silks.

Venetian masks and gondolas are spread all over this capital's shiny fabrics. They sound the carnival note in new printed patterns where they appear, ebon black and lace edged, mixed with pastel colored on crepe and chiffon grounds.

Large back masks spot white chiffons in company with pink roses. Smaller masks share with printed gondolas the tuning up of the Venetian scene. In other patterns, black masks and cyclamen colored bowknots go carnival together.

Roosevelts Honor Speaker of the House And Mrs. Bankhead at State Dinner

Ninety Guests, Including 26 Members of Congress, Are Seated At Table; Musicale Follows

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

ON THE HOME STRETCH of the 1938-39 White House social calendar, President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained last evening at their final State dinner of the season. The Speaker of the House of Representatives and Mrs. William B. Bankhead were honor guests at the event attended by 90 guests, including 26 members of Congress, John L. Lewis, Alexander Woollcott, a scattering of service officials and members of the press, and several personal friends of the host and hostess.

HOPE R. MILLER

The horseshoe-shaped table, decorated with pink roses, baby primula and maidenhair fern, was also embellished with the famous Monroe plaque, epergnes and candelabra. Starting promptly at 8 o'clock, the dinner was followed by a musicale featuring Ernest Schelling, pianist; Margaret Speaks, soprano, and Rene Le Roy, flutist. Celius Dougherty and Margaret Tolson were accompanists.

One More Function on White House Calendar

There is only one more function on the official White House calendar this season, the Army and Navy reception tomorrow evening. Another "dinner date" for President and Mrs. Roosevelt will be filled next Tuesday, however, when they dine with the Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner at the Washington Hotel.

Today Mrs. Roosevelt will be a luncheon guest of the Social Hygiene Society at the Mayflower, and this evening she will attend the meeting of the District of Columbia Council of Social Agencies.

Mrs. Cordell Hull will fete the First Lady at a luncheon tomorrow. On Friday, Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at a luncheon, and that evening she will attend the opening of the Junior League Follies. She will spend Saturday and Sunday in Hyde Park. On Monday she will entertain at a tea for the Society of Sponsors, and that evening will talk before a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association at the John Quincy Adams School.

Mrs. Roosevelt will have her next press conference on Tuesday; will be guest of honor at a luncheon given that day by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., and will entertain at a White House musicale that afternoon.

Miss Perkins Fetes Mrs. Roosevelt At Luncheon

Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, entertained at a luncheon yesterday at her home on California street in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt.

The other guests were Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Norman H. Davis, Mrs. Arthur O. Choate and Mrs. Meredith Hare, of New York; Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Miss Marguerite Wells, of Minneapolis; Mrs. Robert R. Dr. Hornbeck Fetes Nelson Johnson

Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck had a few men friends of Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson in for cocktails yesterday at his home on Wyoming avenue. The guests included State Department friends of the envoy who wanted to hear about his recent trip across the Burma Pass en route from China to this country.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will leave shortly for New York for a brief stay. Later, they will go to Cody, Wyo., for a visit.

Underwood & Underwood.

Plans Dinner Before Play

Mrs. J. Y. Houghteling, a graduate of Byrn Mawr, is among those planning dinners before the benefit performance tomorrow evening of "Washington Merry-go-Round," Leon Pearson's play, at the Wardman Park Hotel. The benefit is being arranged by the Washington Committee of the Affiliated Schools for Workers. Proceeds will go to increase the scholarship funds for the Bryn Mawr Summer School (the Hudson Shore School), the Southern School, at Asheville, N. C., and the Office Workers School, at the University of Chicago.

Mrs. Michael Straus, in charge of arrangements for the benefit, will also entertain at dinner tomorrow night. Other hostesses will include Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Mrs. Robert W. Horton, Miss Gertrude Bancroft, Miss Helen Herrmann, Miss Barbara Donald and Mrs. Howard P. Vermilya.

Gives Party

Mrs. Joseph F. Randall gave a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday.

About The Town

—With Dudley Harmon

THAT MUSIC hath charms for members of Captial society has never been more forcefully demonstrated this winter than during the past week. Coincidentally with plans for the opening of the annual drive of the National Symphony Orchestra, and the setting of Friday as the date for the first meeting of the Washington Opera Association, there is the recent flurry of musicales in private homes. These are happy days indeed for the man who rents all the little gilt chairs to the hostesses.

DUDLEY HARMON

This week opened with two parties where the accent was on music—that given on Monday by the French Ambassador, and the reception at which the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith entertained last evening following the concert of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. This group always draws a brilliant audience, and with Kirsten Flagstadt as soloist, as last evening, "absolutely everybody" turns out.

SINCE they returned from Austria, where Mr. Messersmith was Minister, Mr. and Mrs. Messersmith have been living in the spacious house on Twenty-ninth street in Georgetown which was for many years the home of the late Viscount J. Henri de Sibour. Last evening guests gathered in the long drawing room, in the patio with its window boxes filled with bright flowers, and in the dining room, where a buffet supper was served.

The reception was a small one, as such things go, with only about 40 guests present. These included Washington's leading music patrons, most of whom have met the guest of honor, Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony, and Mrs. Ormandy before.

Mrs. Louis Mustard, of Wellesley, Mass., mother of the hostess, and her niece, Miss Anne Layton, of Wilmington, Del., both of whom are visiting her, were on hand for the party last evening. They sat with Mr. and Mrs. Messersmith in their box at the concert.

KIRSTEN FLAGSTAD appeared at the Messersmith's party, much to everybody's delight. She wore a black tulle dress over white satin. Small tables had been placed in the patio, and Miss Flagstad sat at one of them with Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., who was attired in a black velvet dress trimmed with a white lace bertha. At the same table were Mr. and Mrs. Ormandy, the latter gowned in white topped with a sequin jacket.

Mrs. Messersmith was dressed in white crepe covered with silver embroidery and fashioned with a crimson sash. Her corsage was of orchids.

AMONG THE OTHER guests were the Hungarian Minister and Mme. John Pelenyi. Mme Pelenyi was in cherry red satin with a cluster of flowers at the shoulder. Still others were Mrs. Edwin Watson, in dark blue satin; Mrs. Harold Tittman, who sat with Signora Valeria Cosmelli, wife of the Counselor of the Italian Embassy; Miss Mabel Boardman, looking very regal in black lace; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Miller.

THE TABLE in the dining room was centered with a bowl of fruit, and the menu of the evening consisted, among other things, of chicken salad, bouillon, stuffed olives, and, of course, champagne.

Entertains Iowa Guest

Miss Barbara Henning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning, has as her guest Miss Phyllis Rand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rand, of Salmon, Idaho, and will give a small dinner party for her, Monday evening, February 13.

Mrs. Carlton J. Holdrege will entertain at a cocktail party for Mrs. Henning, who is her niece, next Monday afternoon. Mrs. Henning has returned from a stay at Palm Beach.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone has cards out for a luncheon on Wednesday, February 8.

Mrs. Frank A. West will entertain at a cocktail party on Sunday afternoon.

Philadelphia Symphony Attracts Brilliant Throng

One of Largest Audiences of Season Attends Concert; Eugene Ormandy Directs; Kirsten Flagstad Soloist

One of the most brilliant, and certainly one of the largest audiences of the season turned out at Constitution Hall last evening for the concert of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Eugene Ormandy, with Kirsten Flagstad, star of the Metropolitan Opera, as soloist.

The program was an all Beethoven-Wagner one. After Mme. Flagstad's great concluding number, the "Liebestod" from "Tristan und Isolde," you could have heard a pin drop, so enraptured was the audience.

Anyone not knowing the season of the year might have guessed that it was winter, however, as every time there was a pause in the music there followed a terrific outburst of coughing all over the house!

Every seat in the large hall was taken. Miss Mabel Boardman occupied her usual box, having as her guests Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin and Anthony de Balasy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation. As usual, Miss Boardman and her party arrived in good time before the concert began.

Harlan Stones In Audience

In the box next to theirs were Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, the latter wearing a mink coat over her black silk dress, and a green necklace. Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, the latter wearing a salmon colored velvet wrap trimmed with mink, occupied a box with the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, the latter looking even lovlier than usual in a gown of pink and silver lame with bows at the shoulders and pink flowers at the bodice.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, wore an ermine wrap over her gown. In her party was Miss Malvina Thompson, secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, the latter in a silver fox cape, had as guests in their box the Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Zuberbuhler. The former Margot Garrett topped off her gown with an ermine coat.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith, who gave a party after the concert for M. Ormandy, had with them Mrs. Messersmith's mother, Mrs. Louis Mustard, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., and her niece, Miss Anne Layton, of Wilmington, Del.

A study in contrasts were blonde Mrs. Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Marion Warburg, a brunette beauty, who shared a box with Mr. Woodward and Mrs. Warburg's brother, Dr. Jerry Babb. Mrs. Woodward was in pale gold satin and Mrs. Warburg's gown had a varicolored bodice in which green predominated.

Dr. Kindler Occupies Box

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, was for once in the audience. He occupied a box with Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland Hill. Mrs. Hill, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, wore a severely simple green gown with tiny cap sleeves.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick arrived just before the concert began, Mrs. Dick wearing a tailored wrap of lipstick red trimmed with gold buttons over her gown.

Mme. Ormansky, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy, occupied a box with ladies of the Embassy staff. She wore an ice blue satin gown with a fur wrap. The Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness of Sant' Orsola; Countess Guerino Roberti, and Angus Malcolm were others present from the Diplomatic Corps.

Seen chatting during the intermission were Mrs. Kenneth Bewley, in a brocaded gown; Mrs. L. M. C. Smith strolling with Mrs. Alger Hiss, Mrs. Frank West, Hrs. Edward Burling, Mrs. John Carter Vincent, in a frock of changeable taffeta in shades of brown and green, and Miss Maxine Davis, who wore a mink coat over her gown of black with a blue bodice.

Others in the audience included Mrs. William Castle, wearing an ermine wrap; Miss Alma Ruggles, Miss Ruth Sowers, Mrs. Joseph Bradley and her daughter, Miss Mary Bradley, Joseph Heffernan, Mr. and Mrs. William Zimmerman, Mrs. Jesse Hildebrand, and many others of note.

400 Donors At Council Luncheon

Proceeds to Be Used To Further Charities Of Jewish Organization

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Nearly 400 yesterday attended the donor luncheon of the Washington Chapter of the National Council of Jewish Women, the first it has ever sponsored. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Eugene Meyer and Mrs. Nathan Straus were guests of honor at the affair which was given in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel with music and a fashion show comprising the program for the afternoon.

Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, president of the council for the third year, had with her at the head table, in addition to the honor guests, other officers and representatives of the other Jewish women's organizations in the city.

Mrs. Garfield Kass was chairman of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Alven Newmyer, Mrs. Leonard B. Schloss, who acted as mistress of ceremonies, and Mrs. Alexander Wolf, as co-chairmen.

Luncheon Proceeds Reach$ 1,000

The proceeds of the luncheon, approximately $1,000, will be used to further the charitable activities of the organization, including work for the blind, its student loan fund, aid to the foreign born and the refugee work to which it has contributed generously in recent months.

Many of the members earned their tickets by means of the rummage sale conducted in connection with arrangements for the affair. They were credited with the amount of their sales at the rummage store and some earned amounts equivalent to several tickets making this additional contribution to the council's project.

In former years benefit functions have been sponsored, including an al fresco party at one of the country clubs, a gay 90's entertainment, a dance and a musicale, but none has been so largely attended or has brought such a substantial amount to the treasury as yesterday's luncheon.

Agati Horzi Heard on Program

The musical program presented by Agati Horzi, of New York, who was heard in a group of opera arias, and Cantor Rabofsky, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, who sang a group of ballads, accompanied by Mrs. Jerome J. Krick.

The fashion show included frocks for street, sports and evening wear which were shown by members of the council acting as models. They included Mrs. Mac Wolberg, Mrs. Daniel Cohn, Mrs. Simon Eichberg and Mrs. Milton Ritzenberg.

Committee members assisting with the officers were Mrs. Benjamin Brill, who had charge of the rummage; Mrs. Harry Erlich, co-chairman; Mrs. Harry Roller, chairman of tickets; Mrs. Arthur Neuman, chairman of hostesses; Mrs. Dorothy Rothschild, chairman of program; Mrs. Harry Kaplan, chairman of publicity; Mrs. Maurice Salomon, co-chairman; Mrs. Julius Goldstein, chairman of ushers.

Col. Harrington Lauds Bill to Women's Press

Enforcement of the so-called political appointment prohibition for the Works Progress Administration, approved by the House-Senate joint conference, will be directly in line with the policy pursued by his predecessor, Harry Hopkins, Col. Francis Harrington, new administrator, told members of the Women's National Press Club yesterday. He indicated Mr. Hopkins had gone as far as possible without "teeth" in the law, to eliminate politics from the WPA.

Col. Harrington told members of the club he would welcome the legal penalties provided in the measure and would enforce the provisions. Paying tribute to Mr. Hopkins as "a remarkable person," he added that the orders Mr. Hopkins had dictated himself showed his sincere desire to keep politics out of the WPA.

The new administrator also asserted he was ready, as soon as the measure was passed, to start investigation of the 3,000,000 people working under the WPA to determine how many were not in need of employment. He expects to have a report ready for Congress by April.

He prefaced his discussion of his present position as administrator of the WPA with an outline of his previous Army service, his experience in directing the mobilization of the CCC and later as assistant administrator in charge of construction. He smilingly reassured his audience that his being an engineer did not prejudice him against the women's and professional projects although some of them may need examination and possible changes, he said.

Questioned as to the Federal arts projects, he explained the presence of alleged "reds" in some of them by the fact they were organized in densely populated cities, where there was more likelihood of such agitation.

Col. Harrington was introduced by Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller, president of the club, who presided at the luncheon. She also presented Howard O. Hunter, assistant WPA administrator, another guest of honor.

Opera Gathering

The meeting of the Washington Opera Association, originally scheduled for next Sunday at the Sulgrave Club, has been advanced to this Friday, from 5 to 6, and will be held at the home of Miss Elizabeth Howry, 3304 O street.

Mrs. Hoadley wore with her black crepe, a gold and pearl clip, a pearl necklace and a corsage of violets at her belt. Mrs. Dunbar's gown of black velvet was trimmed with insets of crystal and silver embroidery down the full-length sleeves, and with it she wore a corsage of gardenias. Indicted A.M.A. Denied Grand Jury Records

Judge Proctor Holds Public Policy Demands Secrecy for Hearings

The American Medical Association, which is fighting criminal conspiracy charges, yesterday lost its plea that the grand jury records be scrutinized to see whether the prosecutors used improper methods or unlawful evidence to obtain the indictment.

The ruling brought closer to trial the charges against A. M. A., the District Medical Association, the Washington Academy of Surgery, the Harris County (Texas) Medical society and 21 physicians. All were charged with conspiracy to restrain trade in the campaign against Group Health Association, Inc.

Proctor Hears Motion

The defendants' next move was studied by their counsel last night. It was understood they might soon move to dismiss the indictment on the ground that medicine is not a trade and so is not affected by the Sherman antitrust act.

Justice Proctor, who heard the motion, said in his opinion yesterday that the grand jurors' oath of secrecy about what happened in the locked and guarded nine-week investigation sealed their lips permanently. He rejected the contrary case relied on by A. M. A., saying the departure "seems to have made but slight impression upon the Federal courts in disposing of many kindred questions arising since that time; nor can I accept that view. Considerations of public policy require a lasting secrecy."

Courts may go back of an indictment to see whether there is anything irregular in the hearings, Justice Proctor said, "but it is a power sparingly used."

Only a charge supported by the sworn statement that the accuser had actual knowledge of misconduct, the court said, would justify removing secrecy from the proceedings. The A. M. A. motion was supported only by a sworn statement based on "information and belief."

Jurors' Lips Sealed

"Thus," said the opinion, "we have the novel situation of defendants admitting that they are in no position to file the essential pleading, yet nevertheless asking that the inquiry be ordered anyway, in the expectation or hope that material will turn up to support a proper plea . . .

"The defendants complain that with the lips of jurors sealed and the transcript closed to them they cannot obtain the true facts except by aid of the court. But it must be remembered that sound reasons of public policy in the administration of justice lie back of the rules which forbid free access to these channels of information."

Making public what happened in the grand jury room, he said, was too high a price to pay for correcting an occasional error.

AN OPEN LETTER to the GOVERNMENT and PEOPLE of The United States:—

WHILE you read this message, a major human tragedy is taking place. A question of the greatest importance to our country and to the entire world is being decided.

A brave nation is fighting against terrible odds, not only for its own independence and freedom, but for the very life of democracy everywhere.

THE whole world knows now that the "Franco Revolt" is in reality an invasion. Hitler and Mussolini are bent on destroying the Spanish Republic, and with its destruction gaining vastly increased power in the campaign against the democracies. They have set out to replace a hopeful young republic with a dictatorship patterned on the Nazi and Fascist models. In the Italian and German press the fall of Barcelona was hailed as a "great victory."

With indescribable brutality and complete disregard for world opinion, they have warred against both the armies and the women and children of Spain. It is clear that they intend to use Spain as a means of crippling French and British democracy, and as a powerful springboard to South and Central America, where their agents have for years been busy spreading propaganda against democracy and for fascism.

If Franco, Hitler and Mussolini win in Spain, the fascist penetration of the Western Hemisphere will be immensely strengthened. This will mean a greatly increased defense problem for the United States.

It must not be allowed to happen! Democracy cannot permit unending aggression against it. "Appeasement" has failed. China, Ethiopia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Spain witness its failure.

What can our country do? The American people want peace. They abhor aggression and warring dictatorships. They are committed to the democratic way of life.

Charles C. Burlingham and Philip C. Jessup, distinguished authorities on international law, have said, "It (the lifting of the embargo) would mark a return to our historic policy of avoiding intervention in European civil wars by following a strict hands-off policy . . ."

The signers of this letter believe that Mr. Henry L. Stimson, former United States Secretary of State, is right when he says:

"If this Loyalist Government is overthrown, it is evident that its defeat will be solely due to the fact that it has been deprived of its right to buy from us and other friendly nations the munitions necessary for its defense."

To the plea that the United States must remain neutral, we can only reply that an embargo which permits aid to aggressors and denies it to the victim is flagrantly unneutral. In the words of President Roosevelt to the 76th Congress, "we have learned that when we deliberately try to legislate neutrality, our neutrality laws may operate unevenly and unfairly—may actually give aid to the aggressor and deny it to the victim." A policy which places a friendly, recognized, democratically-elected government on the same plane with the foreign-aided insurrectionist cannot, by any canon of law or tradition, be called neutrality. The embargo, as our most distinguished lawyers and historians have insisted, is a clear violation of international law.

We submit to our fellow Americans and to our government that every obligation of peace, of freedom, of justice, of self-interest, calls upon us to:

LIFT THE EMBARGO—WITHOUT DELAY!

It is not too late. The Spanish Republic still lives. Its people, who still control Central Spain with Valencia and iron-willed Madrid, have no intention of surrendering. A simple act of justice on the part of the United States of America can still turn the tide in favor of democracy.

We who have signed this letter want to hear the cheer of hope and new courage that will go up in every land, including our own, when the word goes out that The United States has lifted the embargo against Spain.

American public opinion has given our government a clear mandate to act. It is clear that when the true significance and consequences of the embargo are understood, no one sympathetic to the cause of democracy could agree to the continuance of the embargo.

In the name of American fair play and of all our best traditions—

LIFT THE EMBARGO—NOW!

800 Rejected By WPA Walk D. C. Streets

Lewis and Welfare Groups Call Truce Needy Search For Food

As Investigator Burdette Lewis and local welfare groups called a "truce," in efforts to get the District's relief situation before Congress immediately, more than 800 men and women recently removed from WPA rolls yesterday wandered from agency to agency asking about their next meal. Their ranks include 227 old men and 600 women with dependent children.

Unable to accept the word of WPA that the 800 are eligible for social security aid, the Public Assistance Division is beginning its own investigation. Two P. A. D. workers are making appointments for interviews with them. Alice Hill, the director, said last night she hoped four more investigators could be added to the project. The clearance will take several weeks, it was believed.

"They are doing as unfortunates always do in such circumstances, living on the next poorest class and farming out their children while they try to find work or relief," William H. Savin, director of the Family Service Association, said.

Private Agencies Lack Funds

The F. S. A., like other private agencies in Washington, is unable to give the 800 more than interviews, and is a week behind in them.

In an effort to "pour oil on the troubled relief waters" stirred up by the Lewis report, the Monday Evening Club yesterday announced that it is almost ready to take its case to Congress. Other agencies are preparing to enter the fight for additional funds, and an emergency deficiency allotment, if possible.

Endeavoring to clarify the controversial Lewis investigation, the Monday Evening Club reworded what it considered the 19 most important relief needs of the District and asked Lewis: "Did you say this?" Lewis replied: "In the main your statement of my summary is correct, and obviously clear." In addition, he presented 17 other points which he urged the club to consider.

Among the 19 points stressed by the Monday Evening Club and agreed to by Lewis are: Need for improvement in organization of public welfare agencies in the District; a single applications office for all types of relief; need for consolidation of public agencies, and need for immediate action to get $730,000 additional general relief for 1939-40 and $210,000 for additional personnel.

Roberts Sees Agreement

William A. Roberts, former People's Counsel and chairman of the club's relief subcommittee, expressed delight that there had been "some little agreement" as to what the report said. He declared:

"We can now go to Congress with something agreed upon."

The Monday Evening Club, of which Rhoda Milliken, head of the Women's Division of the Police Department, is president, was active in urging investigation into relief affairs.

Otto J. Cass, Deputy WPA Administrator for the District, said yesterday that approximately 150 more persons, thought eligible for Social Security funds, are to be removed from WPA rolls, but that they would be let off a few at a time. Between 75 and 100 women with dependent children are being kept on WPA projects "when the integrity of the project" demands it.

Will Reinstate Qualified

"We stand ready to take back immediately all those who have been let off and are found not to be eligible for other aid, Cass declared.

Miss Hill said it probably would be ten days before she would have any figures on the number of persons interviewed by the PAD during January, or could give any idea concerning the proportions of persons who can be shifted into the Social Security categories.

Two Youths Held For Robberies and Taxicab Holdups

A colored boy of 17 was arrested yesterday after a social security card was found near a gas station owned by W. H. Haynson at New Jersey avenue and E street northwest which had been entered and robbed by burrowing a hole through a wall.

The investigation was made by Detective Watson Salkeld.

Another youth, aged 18, arrested when a cab driver recognized him in a cafeteria as having held him up a week ago. The boy has been identified in three other taxi holdup cases, and has admitted serving time in a Pennsylvania jail.

First Conviction Made for Business License Violation

In the first conviction of its kind, Judge Walter J. Casey of Police Court yesterday fined Morris Burak, Maine avenue merchant, $150 for failing to possess a District business privilege license.

Because Burak's firm owed the District approximately $40 in business privilege taxes, he had been refused a business privilege license for 1938-39.

Bandit Whitewashed In Taking $28.21

A colored bandit is believed to have destroyed an important clew by taking a bath yesterday.

The clew was whitewash splashed over the bandit by William Lawler, 18, gas station attendant who was robbed of $28.21 by his knife-wielding assailant. The bandit escaped.

Retiring Fisheries Chief Wins Freedom By Telling Story to Moot Court; Officials Praise Conservation Work

Frank Bell, Commissioner of Fisheries, last night won his freedom, after an hour-long legal battle, before a moot court held at Hogate's Restaurant.

Bell, who retires from office March 21, went to the restaurant as guest of more than 500 of his friends.

He walked straight into a police trap.

Before the trap shut, Bell heard praise for his 6-year conservation campaign from Congressional leaders and others including Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, vice president of the Izaak Walton League; J. Bruce Kremer, former Democratic National Committeeman from Montana; former Senator Clarence Dill, of Washington; Senator Lundeen, of Minnesota; Representatives Bland, of Virginia; McMillan, of South Carolina, and Cochran, of Missouri, and former Representative McClintic, of Oklahoma.

Lieut. Clarence Talley gave Bell a fishing pole from the Police Department.

Then, as he thanked the speakers, four policemen, Detective Sergeants Guy Rone, Hugh Roble, H. D. Secrest and Jake Wolfe, seized Bell and Fred Orsinger, aquarium director. Both were charged with the mysterious disappearance of some goldfish and bass, "against the peace and Government of the United States."

The judge, former Representative Holland, of Ohio, ordered a jury to find Bell guilty and sentenced him to ten years in his home State of Washington. Then he was freed for telling a story.

Trial of Orsinger was overlooked.

N. R. GRANT J. F. GARTLAND J. M. SCRANAGE

Tribute to the faithful service and enduring loyalty of J. Martin Scranage, retiring assistant superintendent, Division of Postmasters, was paid at a testimonial dinner given him last night by 73 of his associates at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest.

Scranage, who passed his seventieth birthday three weeks ago, had been associated with the Postoffice Department for over 42 years. A graduate of Fairmont State Normal School, he entered the Geological Survey, July 17, 1894, after teaching school for three years. He was transferred to the Postoffice Department, September 29, 1896. Studying law at Columbian University Law School, now George Washington, he was admitted to the bar in 1897.

He was appointed six years ago to the post from which he has just retired.

William J. Dixon, superintendent, Division of Postmasters, who was the toastmaster, presented Scranage with a radio on behalf of his friends. Charles C. Wenrich, Asistant Deputy First Assistant Postmaster General; Joseph F. Gartland, assistant postoffice inspector; Vincent C. Burke, postmaster, Washington, D. C.; Jesse M. Donaldson, Deputy First Assistant Postmaster General, and W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, paid warm tribute to Scranage as a friend, and praised his long record of service in the department.

Mrs. Marie Louise Fox was retired, for reasons of age, yesterday from the Bureau of War Risk Litigation, following 21 years of service. Mrs. Fox came here from South Haven, Mich., and worked for a brief period in the War Trade Board.

She served for 14 years in the Veterans' Administration, and subsequently had been employed as a clerk-typist in the Bureau of War Risk Litigation.

Indian Service Employe Retires

John E. Dawson, who served nearly 50 years in the United States Indian Service, was retired for age yesterday. He was congratulated on the character of his services by Commissioner John Collier and presented a desk set at leave-taking by his associates in the Indian Office.

Dawson, it was stated, served the bureau long enough to witness the reversal of policy on the part of the Government toward the Indians. He was regarded by the bureau as an authority on the five civilized tribes of Oklahoma.

He is a member of the District bar. A native of Boston, Dawson intends spending his retirement between that city and Washington.

Last Death Crossing in D. C. Doomed

$300,000 Earmarked In $1,120,000 Road Program to Build B. & O. Overpass

Elimination of Washington's last existing grade crossing—Bates road northeast—often a scene of traffic accidents, was assured yesterday when Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, submitted final plans to the Bureau of Public Roads for an overpass, prior to advertising of bids.

A $300,000 fund from the 1939 Federal road aid prgoram has been earmarked for this project.

$1,120,000 Road Program

At the same time Capt. Whitehurst disclosed he had submitted plans for a $1,120,000 street and road improvement program for the District which will pay half the amount.

The overpass, which will be known as the Taylor street viaduct, crosses the Baltimore Ohio Railroad right of way.

Listed on the proposed improvement program are: Paving Nichols avenue southeast, between Fourth and Upsal streets; Minnesota avenue southeast, between Twenty-seventh street and Benning road; Seventeenth street northeast, between E and K street; Blair road from North Capitol to Peabody streets; Seventh street northeast, from Franklin street to Michigan avenue, and Michigan avenue northeast, between Monroe and Seventh streets.

New Street Listed

One new street, to be known as Hawaii avenue, will be an approach road to the Taylor street viaduct from North Capitol street. It will be approximately 4,000 feet long.

Widening of three streets will be included on the program. These are: Florida avenue northeast, from North Capitol street to West Virginia avenue; Seventh street northwest, from K street to Rhode Island avenue, and Third street northwest from D to K streets.

Navy School Fights Nearby Tall Buildings

Officials of the United States Naval Medical School are expected to protest a proposed change in the zoning regulations which would permit taller buildings near their hospital.

This change, included in a list of 22 will be argued before the District Zoning Commission at 10 a. m. today in the District Building.

It has been proposed to the commission that the 90-foot height district be extended to include property north of E street, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth streets northwest. The present regulation of 60-foot height permits five-story buildings. Under the proposal an eight-story building would be permissible.

Residents of Massachusetts avenue northwest, between Fifteenth and Eighteenth streets, are also planning to protest a proposed 90-foot height change.

Residents of the Eighteenth and Columbia road northwest section are scheduled to uphold their petition objecting to the extension of the first commercial use district on Calvert street, between Biltmore street and Columbia road northwest. This proposal has been before the commission on two previous occasions and each time has been rejected.

Couple Apologize After Disturbing Judge Casey at Ball

Police Court Judge Casey and a young couple who disturbed him at the Shoreham Hotel during the President's Birthday celebration, buried the hatchet in the judge's chambers yesterday and were rewarded by the dismissal of charges against them.

The couple, whose identity is not necessary, were arrested and held at the Eighth Precinct station overnight, charged with being drunk and disorderly. Yesterday, they apologized. Casey said he had no idea the police arrested the couple and thought a reprimand had settled the matter.

Police Free Boys Caught Wrecking Shed for Firewood

Cruiser car police, racing on a call to Clark Court in the 300 block of Fourth street northwest last night, discovered four colored boys tearing down an abandoned shack. They already had taken apart a good-sized fence.

"It's cold at home," explained the boys' spokesman. "We only wanted to take some wood for a fire." Sympathetic police released the youngsters.

Two Women Hurt In City Traffic

Two women were injured in traffic accidents yesterday.

Mrs. Harriet Owens, Oxon Hill, Md., suffered a possible leg fracture when struck by a bicycle at Thirteenth and F streets northwest.

Mrs. Sarah Kapneck, 72, of 811 Kentucky avenue southeast, suffered possible internal injuries and a fractured rib when struck by an auto at Eighth and K streets northeast. Police said the driver was Walter Pettiford, 4609 Mead street northeast.

Randolph Asks Vote Fight Go On

Urges Women to Let Congress Know Suffrage Issue Is Not Dormant

A plea to keep alive the fight for District suffrage was made last night by Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, in a talk before the League of Women Voters at the University Women's Club.

Representative Randolph, who is chairman of the House District Committee and who has introduced in Congress a bill for a constitutional amendment giving Washingtonians the right to vote, declared:

"Let Congressmen know that this is not a dormant subject even though no action has been gained. Keep the issue a live one and convince Washingtonians that they have a real democratic principle for which to fight."

He said that in the last election only 15 per cent of qualified voters of some States exercised their franchise.

"There are gentlemen in Congress from such States," Randolph maintained, "who would deny the vote to the educated and enlightened people of the Nation's Capital.

It is safe to say, Randolph declared, "that there are 150,000 of the 750,000 people living here who are eligible to vote in the District if the franchise ever is granted.

The District committee leader said that his group is considering a small loan measure for the District, where pawnshops are now banned, so that loans can be made at an interest rate of 2 per cent a month.

"While a 2 per cent rate may seem excessive," Randolph said, "it is 40 per cent less than allowed in Maryland."

Capital Drive On Cancer Set For April

An educational program against cancer, which last year caused the death of 869 persons, here will be inaugurated within two months, Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, announced yesterday.

The full force of the National Society for the Prevention of Cancer, the American Association for the Study of Neoplastic Disease, the District Medical Society and all local women's clubs will join the health department in acquainting local residents with early symptoms of the disease.

"It has been definitely established that the disease can be successfully treated if discovered during the early stages," Dr. Seckinger stated.

A lively campaign to present the message to the entire city by means of lectures and demonstrations will begin in April, National Cancer Month.

Dr. Seckinger said mortality of the disease had been increasing steadily. Since the disease is more prevalent with persons in advanced ages, and since the life span has also increased, the increase in the number of cancer death is quite apparent, he said.

"However, this does not mean that we cannot cut down the number of deaths from cancer," he stated.

Last year cancer rated third among the chief causes of death. In 1937 it held the second position.

Dr. Arthur H. Estabrook, representing the National Society; Dr. Eugene R. Whitmore, of the American Association for the Study of Neoplastic Disease, and Dr. Dorothy R. Ferebee, colored physician, will aid in the program.

Southeast Group Asks Extension of Parking Meters

The Southeast Washington Citizens Association, meeting last night at Buchanan School, went on record as indorsing purchase and installation of additional parking meters for the District.

The association asked the director of traffic that lights be installed along Pennsylvania avenue southeast at Fifth, Seventh, Eighth and Fifteenth streets, and at Eleventh and M streets southeast.

A petition that the proposed Washington auditorium be placed at the end of East Capitol street, along with the armory and stadium to be built there, was directed to the appropriate Senate and House committees.

A special committee, under the chairmanship of William J. Carey, was appointed to investigate a report that the morgue and the Municipal Lodging House were to be moved to the Southeast section.

Women Ask Probe Of Red Caps' Pay

The National Women's Trade Union League yesterday asked Wage and Hour Administrator Andrews to investigate status of "red caps" at Union Station, to determine if the fair labor standards act is being complied with. It charged red cap pay comes largely through tips and is "profoundly inadequate to supply the needs of a family."

Poles Seek U. S. Helium For Stratosphere Trip

Poland wants to buy 200,000 cubic feet of helium in the United States, it was disclosed yesterday, for a stratospheric balloon flight in an attempt to break the world's altitude record.

The Polish embassy asked the National Munitions Control Board, which is authorized by Congress to determine whether particular helium shipments shall be permitted, for permission to export the gas.

MRS. ISABELLE HAGGETT

Retired From U. S. Service at 70, She's Now a G. W. U. Co-ed at 75

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really lots of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

Say a little prayer for Mrs. Isabelle B. Haggett, a co-ed at George Washington University, for today she takes her final mid-year exams in English romantic poetry and she is a mite worried.

Her professors, however, most of whom are her junior in years, would say her anxiety is needless, since Mrs. Haggett always makes good grades.

Yesterday was not the best time to intrude upon Mrs. Haggett in her Bethesda home, cramming as she was for today's finals, but in her serene, almost shy, way she made it clear that the interview would be quite all right.

"My eyes need a little rest anyway, I suppose," she said.

33 Years in Service

Hers is a typical case of beginning life anew at 70. Reaching that age a little over five years ago, she was retired from Federal service, according to law. For 33 years she had been a teacher and clerk in the Office of Indian Affairs, always in the field, and suddenly finding herself free and burdenless created a problem such as she had never faced before: What to do with herself?

Readjusting herself was made the more difficult because she was childless and her husband, a field official in the Indian Service, had died a few years earlier.

First thing Mrs. Haggett did was come to Washington to live. That was in November, 1933. She and her sister took an apartment together.

One day she said to her sister, half apologetically:

"I think I'd like to take a subject or two at G. W."

Sister Sympathetic

The sister was sympathetic to the idea and Mrs. Haggett went down and registered. She signed up only for an English course.

"At first I thought that would be enough," she said yesterday. "I had no idea of ever enrolling for a full program's work. It would just be something to help pass the time."

The following year she added another subject. Last year she took four and this semester she has her hands full with political science, French, history of Iberian civilization, in all of which she has already taken her final examinations, and English literature.

Today she no longer attends classes and bones for quizzes just to "pass the time away." Well into her 70's, she has a new objective in life, to round out a sound liberal arts education, perhaps obtain a degree and then go abroad to write.

Traveled Over United States

As a Government field worker and the wife of one, Mrs. Haggett has traveled all over the United States and now she wants to tour Europe and write about it. A couple of years ago she and her sister went abroad but that, being one of those hurry-up, conducted trips, only whetted this co-ed's appetite for more.

History is her favorite subject. The present war in Spain notwithstanding, she wishes very much to visit that country, a desire that has been burning ever since she first came into association with Spanish-speaking peoples in the American Southwest.

Ancient history, medieval history, contemporary European history, North and South American history—Mrs. Haggett has studied them all at George Washington. While other women her age—her chronological age, this is—are home nursing imaginary ills she is in a classroom discussing the fall of the Roman Empire or dissecting Wordsworth.

Attends Summer Classes

When summer comes she attends summer classes. Her French this year is coming easier as a result of the beginner's course she took last July and August but she admits she does not have that elusive Parisienne accent down pat yet.

Mrs. Haggett was born in a little town in Indiana. Being a Hoosier almost guarantees her success if she turns to writing, as she'd like to do (witness Tarkington, Ade, Nicholson, Riley, etc.). She had a year's training in normal school but no college work.

Last night the Philadelphia Orchestra played and Kirsten Flagstad sang in Convention Hall. Mrs. Haggett wanted so much to go. But she didn't. She had to cram for today's examinations.

Maneuvers Slated For August; to Be Held Near Manassas And Fredericksburg

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—Mass maneuvers of more than 20,000 soldiers in northern Virginia—an area of strategic importance in the defense of Washington were announced today by Third Corps Area Army Headquarters.

It will be the first time in more than a quarter century that maneuvers of such magnitude will be held in that area, officers said.

May Be Held in August

National Guardsmen and regular troops from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia will concentrate on ground where numerous battles and skirmishes of the Civil War were fought. The probable dates for the maneuvers are August 5 to 19.

Headquarters announced the War Department had approved an area selected about 100,000 acres bounded roughly in the north by Manassas, where the two battles of Bull Run were fought, and the Quantico Marine Corps reservation in the south. Included in the territory are the Belvoir military reservation and the Chopawamsie recreational area.

The maneuvers supplant summer training periods in National Guard camps and Army posts usually held in each State. Army officials said the maeuvers will afford training not obtainable with smaller numbers. Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons is corps area commander.

Money Not Appropriated

Officials considered it premature to name the troops participating because money for the maneuvers has not yet been appropriated and also because the general scheme of maneuvers is not sufficiently crystalized to warrant preparation of detailed plans.

They said, however, almost all Regular Army troops, National Guardsmen and numerous Reserve officers will participate.

Racial Hatred Deplored by Methodists

Attending the Methodist Union "victory dinner-meeting" last night at Hamline Methodist Church, more than 200 minister and laymen of the denomination heard the Rev. Harold Case, of Scranton, Pa., appeal for "a Christian democracy in this modern day."

"Such a democracy, founded on brotherhood and righteousness, would rise above racial hatred," he said, deploring the persecutions of Jews in Germany.

It was announced that 2,000 members representing $2,000, had been secured in the campaign, of which the function was a climax.

Tear Gas Bomb Explodes In Cafe; Police Mystified

A tear gas bomb was exploded in a restaurant at 917 Eleventh street southeast yesterday morning, and police advanced two theories—pranksters or gangsters.

Lubin was unable to explain the incident. He told investigators he has had no labor trouble and no enemies. Police said there was a chance that the bomb was thrown through a broken window panel as a joke.

G.W.U. FIVE SMASHES TOLEDO IN MAJOR UPSET

46-29 Score Stuns 3,500 At Tech Gym

Ohio Basketeers Take Worst Beating In Four Years; 18 Points for Chuckovits

By Jack Munhall.

Playing a brand of basketball in the first half that would have overwhelmed any team that has appeared here in recent years, George Washington last night completely outclassed the highly touted Toledo University to win, 46 to 29, before 3,500 fans at Tech gym.

Showing utter disregard for the vaunted Churck Chuckovitz & Co., the Colonials tok the lead in the first minute of play and never lost it in recording their seventh victory against five defeats.

It was the worst licking Toledo has suffered in more than four years. And it was no fluke!

The Rockets were little more than a four-man team, except on offense, when every play revolved about the slim, dead-panned Chuckovits, and no four-man team ever assembled would have beaten George Washington last night.

Chuckovits, though he shared with Capt. Bob Faris of George Washington, the scoring honors of the game with 18 points, was not an exceptional basketball player, it pains us to report.

Sixteen Shots Missed

Twenty-two shots, from far and wide did the Chucker fire at the basket from the floor. Sixteen of them missed, some by feet. From the foul line, though, Chuckovits functioned as befits the man they call the greatest offensive machine the collegiate ranks has ever seen.

Benefitting by unusually close officiating which awarded him a foul chance each and every time a Colonial as much as cast an evil glance in his direction, the chucker was given six chances from the 15-foot stripe. And six times he swished through points that neglected to touch the rim en route to the net.

Albeit, Chuckovits remained slightly more than a point better than Hank Luisetti's all-time collegiate record scoring average for four years. His 18 points held his seasonal average above 16.2 and boosted his three-year average to about 17.4. Chuckovits' three-year total is now 989.

Faris Leads Attack

Though it was the Chucker the near-capacity crowd came to applaud, it was the handsome, dead-eyed Bob Faris who drew its loudest cheers after the first five minutes of play. For it was Faris and Reds Auerbach, a substitute until recently, who led the amazing set shot attack that the Colonials lost in that first half.

Nothing short of sensational was that attack. From all angles of the floor, and from under the basket, too, the Colonials, particularly Faris and Auerbach, poured a veritable storm of baskets. And after three minutes of the game had elapsed, they led, 9-2.

Steadily the George Washington lead was increased until at half time, the Toledo Rockets were on the wrong end of a 34-15 count. And with each succeeding minute they became more and more demoralized until at the finish they little resembled the five that won 12 of 14 games, losing only to Ball State on a disputed one-point decision and to mighty L. I. U.

Just Don't Bother

Near the finish the Colonials were not even trying to score.

Fortified with an ample 43-21 advantage with 10 minutes, or half of the second half, gone, George Washington shot only when the chance of success weighed heavily in its favor.

Although Capt. Faris was easily the game's outstanding player, sev-

Helen Detweiler Wins by 4 and 2

Belleair, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, started defense today of her Belleair title, downing Miss Celia Townsend, of Toronto, 5 and 4. Mrs. Vare, playing steady golf, rounded the turn in 38 to take a three-up advantage.

Mrs. Eric Phillips, another Canadian, rang up a 5-and-3 victory over Mrs. T. R. Palmer, of Memphis, while Miss Betty Myers, of Clearwater, Fla., was nosed out by Mrs. George Jewett, of Orange, N. J.

Mrs. Scott Probasco, of Chattanooga, Tenn., bowed to Miss Helen Detweiler, of Washington, D. C., tournament medalist, 4 and 2. In the semifinals Mrs. Vare is to meet Miss Myers and Mrs. Phillips will meet Miss Detweiler.

Vanguard of Nat Rookie Pitchers Heads South

The first robin, or flower, of spring can't be far away when Manager Bucky Harris herds his first collection of rookies together for the Southern training trip. 4th Straight To Tide; Tech Bows, 27-19

MacBride's Five Held Scoreless for Quarter; Maroon Trails Ardent Foe Most of Way

By Bill Burnett.

The roughshod march of Eastern High toward its fifth interhigh basketball crown in the last six years continued yesterday on the Lincoln Park floor, as Anacostia, the baby of the series, held the defending champions scoreless for the first eight minutes, but eventually lost its third game, 36 to 25. It was the White Tide's fourth consecutive triumph in the series, assuring it of a place in he championship tournament next month.

In the opening games of the doubleheader, Central annexed its second victory in three starts, beating out Tech by the simple means of running up a lead and holding on, 27 to 19. The two losers in the twin bill have yet to win a game.

The banner crowd, on hand for an anticipated grudge match between Anacostia and its mother school, Eastern, wasn't disappointed in the least. The youthful players who started their high school careers at Eastern and shifted to the school on the "flats" when it opened last season, started off with a desperate brand of basketball that might have won the game.

Indians Lead, 4 to 0

While Eastern scored exactly no points in the opening period, Anacostia was able to get 4 on two foul throws and a fancy field goal. Johnny (The Jeep) Placos drew the free tosses with the game barely one minute old, and stolidly made both of them good. A few seconds later Forward Anderson hit the ring with a running overhand shot and that was the limit of scoring.

The surprising 4-to-0 lead of the Indians, however, passed into the records in the first 30 seconds of the second period. Like a bolt of lightning, Eastern's captain, "Soup" Hancock, grabbed the tipoff, dribbled to the basket and scored the team's initial points. He then brought the count up even with a quick overhand from outside the foul line. Once more Anacostia held a lead when Placos sank another foul shot for a 5-to-4 lead, but Lenny Mills did away with that with two more field efforts.

At half time Anacostia had sagged to a 7-point deficit, trailing 14 to 7. The third period, one of the roughest and hottest contested of the game, was a near-even scoring match between the teams, though the Indians sliced 2 points from Eastern's lead. The closest Anacostia was able to approach its arch rival in the last period was 22 to 18.

Without the superb foul-line performance of Placos, a spindley but clever basketer. Anacostia might have been even more soundly thrashed.

As it was, only a hot-handed rush of the Easterners in the dying minutes of the game brought their winning total to 11 points, Rex Hartley and Hancock scoring with a scant 50 seconds remaining. Hancock and Placos tied for scoring honors.

Tech Gains Lead

The meeting of Tech and Central, though featuring more evenly matched teams, hardly held the thrills of the final game. Vic De Leon, Tech reserve center, dropped the first basket of the game, but Erwin Ornstein matched the score for Central. Harry Martin, Central guard, then took a lead for the Mount Pleasanters with a long fling at the loop, and the team was never headed.

Tech's luck at the foul line was largely responsible for its loss, members of the club missing 11 out of 14 chances allowed. Central did considerably better with 7 good heaves out of 11 tries. The game, refereed by Maurice Enright, was featured by a technical foul called on the Tech cheering section. Archie Panago, stocky Central guard, was allowed two foul throws on Marshall Dellinger's oven-enthusiastic guarding, and when the crowd

Griff Denies Nats Signed Eric Tipton

Spikes Report Duke Star Will Join Club After School Term

Reports that Eric Tipton, Duke University grid star, would join the Washington baseball club in the spring, printed by a Richmond newspaper, were regretfully denied last night by Clark Griffith, president of the Nats.

The Richmond paper, according to an Associated Press dispatch, said Tipton, backfield star of the Iron Dukes' Rose Bowl eleven, would report to the Nationals in the spring after completing the scholastic term.

A resident of Petersburg, Va., Tipton batted over .400 last year with Duke and clouted the longest home run ever hit on the Durham campus. He has a powerful throwing arm and is regarded as an excellent major league prospect.

Griffith's brief pointed reply to The Post's query read:

"Nothing doing Tipton. Wish there were. CLARK GRIFFITH.

Eddie Eynon, club secretary, who is still in Washington, pointed out that Duke players usually sign with the Philadelphia Athletics, and that he understood Connie Mack already had signed the Durham ace. Eynon, too, voiced regret that the story was not true.

The Richmond story said Tipton received offers from several major league clubs, including Cleveland and the Boston Red Sox, but decided on Washington because of its comparative nearness to his home, and because no other club matched the club's offer of $3,500 for signing a contract. Tipton, the story continued, probably would be sent to Charlotte.

Spud Chandler, Yankees' Pitcher, Breaks His Ankle

Athens, Ga., Jan. 31 (AP).—Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler, young right-handed pitcher for the World Champion New York Yankees, fractured his right ankle today when he stepped into a hole while working out on the University of Georgia running track.

Attendants at the University Infirmary said the small bone in the ankle was broken. The leg was placed in a cast and Chandler probably will have to remain in bed about a week and will not be able to put his full weight on that foot within six weeks.

Chandler, a former football and baseball star at Georgia, has been completing work on his bachelor of science degree at the university and getting into shape for the opening of spring training.

He won 14 and lost 5 for the Yanks last season before he was forced out with a sore arm. He underwent an operation for removal of a bone spur a few months ago and recently had reported his arm again was normal.

Schwert, New To Congress, Is Old to Baseball

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Vice president Garner and Senator Pat Harrison, who missed no more Washington home games last season than Manager Bucky Harris, will have to look to their laurels as top-ranking Congressional baseball fans this season, for there is a robust young Representative in town who takes the diamond sport without a grain of salt.

SCHWERT

He is Pius L. Schwert, of Buffalo, to whom the crack of a bat and the pounding of spikes on the baseline is akin to the sound of a gong in the ears of an old fire-horse.

Sitting in shirt-sleeves and peering out over a stack of important looking documents on his desk, Schwert grinned as he recalled the years he spent behind the bat in high school, at the University of Pennsylvania, with the New York Yankees, with Newark, Buffalo and, finally, in semipro ranks. And while it may appear that his fortunes declined as he passed from the well manicured turf of the majors to unpolished semi-pro lots, the truth of the matter is that young Schwert was making rapid strides in another direction—business and politics.

Two years on the bench with the Yankees gave him ample time to reflect on the vicissitudes of a ball player's life. He looked around at stars beyond their peak, starting all over again at 40 and with dull, bitter outlooks on life. He saw the ill-paid stars and lesser lights of the game squandering their money in a happy-go-lucky exisetnce, living through the winter on the remains of their baseball salaries, and decided baseball was no career for an ambitious young man looking for financial security. He forthwith decided on a business career.

Lafayette to Penn

Schwert went to the University of Pennsylvania from Lafayette High School, Buffalo, and from the Penn campus directly to the Yanks. His high school mates won fame as the team of "captains," for all later captained their respective college nines. Two, Jack Connelly and Harry Kelly, matriculated at Georgetown. At Penn he contracted measles and scarlet fever in his freshman year, and thus played no baseball. The following season he decided to report for football practice against the explicit instructions of his parents, who all too vividly recalled a broken arm he suffered in a high school game. He went to Trainer Mike Murphy for advice. Michael made his decision quickly.

"If your parents don't want you to play" he advised, "get to blazes

Saint John's Five Swamps Little Hoyas

Cadets Take Second Catholic Prep Foe By 27-14 Count

St. John's, recent conqueror of Gonzaga, virtually clinched the Catholic Prep School Championship yesterday by taking the measure of the Little Hoyas of Garrett Park, 27 to 14, on the Johnnies' floor.

The game was a slow affair, the only bright spot being the continued good play of the St. John's three veterans, Gallagher, Hunt and Mulvihill. Capt. Lou Wimsatt and Bill Decker were best for the Garrett Park quint.

Georgetown Prep used the zone defense which the Johnnies were unable to score with much consistency in the first half, the score being 7-2 in favor of St. John's. In the second half, the Johnnies scored 20 points while the Prepmen made good 12 points.

St. John's continues to keep a good record in the season play, one that may match last year's championship team. The only blemish against the Johnnies' record is a loss to Eastern, currently leading the interhigh school championship series.

Brother Act In Rassle Show

A brother act will be introduced at Turner's Arena tomorrow night on the weekly wrestling card when the Wright boys, of Texas, appear in the preliminary matches.

Jim Wright, who plays the role of a villian, is well known to Washington patrons of the sport, but his brother, "Rube," will be making his debut here. Both were all around athletes at Texas A. and M.

George Pencheff, of Australia, will work against Jim, and Rube will try holds with Sammy Cohen, the old trial horse who usually keeps most newcomers from gaining a foothold here.

Pitt Regains Top Form, Defeats Temple, 42-36

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh Panthers broke a three game losing streak tonight to defeat Temple, 42 to 36, and virtually end the Owls' chances of repeating as Eastern intercollegiate basketball champions.

The visitors dropped their third game in four starts and skidded to fifth place in the league standings, while Pitt moved up to third place.

Temple Names Swan in Place Of Warner

Former Assistant Is Made Head Football Coach

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—Fred H. Swan stepped into the famous shoes of Glenn S. "Pop" Warner as head football coach at Temple University today, intending to continue "Warner-style football with some modifications."

Action of the university football committee in officially moving Swan up from line coach to head coach was no surprise.

The 36-year-old former Stanford star's name moved to the top of the list of possibilities soon after Warner announced his resignation in Palo Alto, Calif., Sunday night. The "Old Fox" himself had recommended Swan, his assistant at Temple for six years.

Earl R. Yeomans, athletic director, said the new coach's selection was "unanimous."

The committee gave Swan a three-year contract. It did not disclose his salary, but a university spokesman said it probably was $7,500, half of what Warner received.

Simultaneously, the committee made Backfield Coach J. Charles "Chuck" Winterburn, also a Stanford graduate, Swan's first assistant, also on a three-year contract.

Swan was out of the city at the time the committee met, but previously he had announced:

"Warner-style football which I played and which I will teach with some modifications is not dead. But like all other styles there must be variations. We'll have a good squad next year . . ."

Swan captained the Stanford team under Warner and played in two Rose Bowl games. He is a native of California. During his sophomore year in college he married a Texas girl. They have two daughters.

Pitt Athletes Will Go Under Big Ten Code

Western Conference Supervision May Lead To Playing Affiliation

By the United Press.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31.—The University of Pittsburgh tonight placed its athletics under supervision of the Western Conference which is popularly known as the big ten.

Officials gave no indication that Pitt has an agreement or hopes to join the high-powered Middle Western group of universities. But close followers of the Panther football team and other Pitt athletics believed that big ten athletic supervision would grow into playing affiliation.

"The faculty committee on athletics at the university . . . voted approval of a co-operative agreement with the Big Ten Conference whereby the commissioner of the conference, John L. Griffith, will render the same service to the University of Pittsburgh as he does for the ten universities comprising the conference," said an announcement.

"By this agreement, instead of the university acting alone in an investigation of all types of rumors concerning alleged violations of eligibility, subsidization, and proselyting in relation to the conduct of its athletics, the university will have the co-operation of 10 other similar institutions.

Pitt will follow all rules of the Big Ten, in which all information regarding allegations of athletic subsidizing and other sports code violations in the conference is filed with Commissioner Griffith and investigated by him. The schools in the conference obey his rulings as strictly as major league baseball teams obey Judge Landis.

Members of the Big Ten are the Universities of Chicago, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Purdue, Ohio State, and Northwestern.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is vacationing, various members of the sports department will write his column.)

Walt Haightney's Ferdinando

Once upon a time in a gymnasium there was a little fellow and his name was Ferdinando D'Bullo. All the other little fellows would skip rope, punch the bag and bloody each other's noses. But not Ferdinando.

HAIGHT

He liked to sit quietly and munch hard candy. He had his favorite spot out of range of the arc light over the ring where he could smell the scent of liniment. Sometimes the physical director would worry about him. He was afraid he would be lonesome all by himself.

"Why don't you exercise at the pulleys, toss the medicine ball and throw your left hook into some boy's snozzle," he would say.

But Ferdinando would shake his head.

"I like it better here in the corner where I can sit and smell the liniment and munch my hard candy," he said.

The director saw that he was not lonesome, and because he was an understanding coach he let him just sit there and be happy.

As the years went by Ferdinando grew and grew, until he was very big and heavy. All the other boys around the gymnasium who had grown up with him would bust each other's beaks, shadow box and put the thumbs of their gloves to their nostrils and snort.

What they wanted most was to be chosen to fight the champion in the big Madison Square Garden.

Sought Roughest of All

One day four men came with black hats pulled down over their eyes and long cigars in their mouths. They were there to pick the biggest, fastest and roughest fighter in all the gymnasium to battle the world's champion in the big Madison Square Garden.

All the other boys ran around grunting, throwing imaginary punches, skipping rope and talking loudly out of the side of their mouths to show these promoters that they were very tough and rough in hopes that they would be picked.

Ferdinando knew that they wouldn't pick him and he didn't care. So he went to his favorite corner away from the lights to smell the liniment and munch hard candy.

Two of the roughest and toughest pugs in all the gymnasium were in the ring. The promoters had chosen them to battle it out for the match with the champion in the big Madison Square Garden.

Now there was a lot of horseplay that went on in the gymnasium. But Ferdinando took no part.

Just as the bell rang to start the match, Ferdinando sat on the chair where somebody had placed a tack with point up.

Well if you were a tack and some big fellow sat on you what would you do? You would stick him. And that is just what the tack did to Ferdinando.

Did It Hurt!

Wow! Did it hurt! Ferdinando jumped up with a snort. He hurdled the ropes and landed in the ring, swinging his fists right and left. The two rough and tough fighters ceased to combat among themselves. They both squared off against Ferdinando. But he just kept swinging his fists. Ferdinando swung with a terrific right and one of the fighters fell on his face. Ferdinando swung with his left and the other fellow slumped forward on his face.

The four promoters saw all and they shouted with joy. Here was the roughest and toughest fighter of all. Just the one to fight the champion in Madison Square Garden.

So on the fight night, they whisked him away to Madison Square Garden in a limousine.

What a night it was! Everybody was shouting, the rafters were creaking and all the lovely ladies had their hair done high.

They paraded down to the ring. First came the seconds, armed with buckets, sponges and liniment. Next came Ferdinando and next came the four promoters with black hats and long cigars.

Then down the opposite aisle came the champion, the proudest of all. He joined his hands high over his head, shook them and bowed to the ladies with their hair done high.

Ferdinando bounded into the ring. Everyone shouted and clapped because they thought he was going to fight fiercely and swing rights and lefts to the champion's head and flatten him on the canvas.

But not Ferdinando. When the bell clanged for the first round the champion rushed out of his corner growling, but Ferdinando simply sat down, reached in his trunks for his bag of hard candy and sat munching and looking with longing eyes at the liniment bottle in his corner.

Ferdinando Just Sat

The crowd booed, the referee pleaded, the champion snarled, but Ferdinando just sat and munched, smelled the liniment and looked at the lovely ladies with their hair done high.

The crowd was mad, the referee was mad, the champion was mad and the promoters were maddest of all those in the big Madison Square Garden.

Old Liners Lack Heavy Fighters

Miller Expects His Lighter Men to Hold Own; Cavaliers Are Well Balanced

Not exactly satisfied with the draw they gained with Catholic University's hard-punching ringmen last week, the University of Maryland boxers yesterday turned their attention to Saturday's match with Virginia at Charlottesville, hopeful of upsetting the potent Cavalier clouters.

Coach Heine Miller again will be without the services of his best heavyweight, Morty Steinback, who only recently arose from a sick bed. Steinback is training daily, but Miller has little hope that he will be available for duty. Herman Raisin, who lost to Jay Turner last week, probably will get the assignment.

Three Standouts

But Maryland, with three standouts on its roster, figures on giving Virginia a brisk battle and will invade the Virginians' lair in the proverbial "pink." Red Dorr, 120-pounder, is the favorite over Platon Galley, Virginia's rookie ringman, inasmuch as he outpointed Johnny Simpson last year in a stirring bout. Galley doesn't compare with Simpson at this early stage of his career, and if he should whip Dorr it will be an upset of major proportions.

Ben Alperstein, Maryland's clever lightweight, and national featherweight title-holder, is a topheavy favorite over Dick Williams, who won two and lost one of his three previous matches. Against Nestor Martinez, whom he knocked out in two rounds, Alperstein last week demonstrated that he was serious when he said he would try for a knockout in future bouts. Ben lost a close decision to Kaslip, of Duke, in his initial test of the season, and blamed it on the fact that he stressed boxing more than punching.

Cronin-Southall Feature

The feature bout of the card evidently will again involve Frank Cronin, Maryland's brilliant 155-pounder, who is serving his first and last year on the squad. Cronin gave Joe Bunsa, of Catholic, a thorough going over last week, and even though he faces a sharpshooter in the person of Virginia's Truman Southall, is expected to give a good account of himself. Cronin, an orthodox mittman, employs a southpaw stance because it is the more natural boxing pose for him.

In Southall, however, the Terp ace meets one of the conference's best ringmen. Southall is undefeated since the opening match of the 1938 campaign, and gives no indication of easing up the pace.

While Maryland's varsity will have its stronger men in the lighter weights, Miller expects to throw a team of promising caliber in the heavier classes against the Cavalier freshmen in the afternoon meet between the yearling teams. With Art Lane, 19-year-old 200-pounder, holding down the heavyweight berth, Miller has an abundance of capable material which he feels will not only win its share of matches this season, but go on to greater fame in varsity roles next winter.

A record crowd for Heurich Amateur Basketball League competition last night saw a lightning-fast Delaware and Hudson five upset Federal Bureau of Investigation in an important first half Heurich Amateur Basketball League game at Heurich gymnasium, 30 to 25.

One of Many Shots the Chucker Missed Here Last Night

Saint Albans Beats Friends

St. Albans annexed its third game of the season yesterday by turning back Friends School, 31 to 15, on the Saints' new floor. Coach Mickey Schonfeld, of Saint Albans, used three teams against the Friends five. In the first quarter, Friends was trailing, 9 to 2.

The second period found the Saints holding a 21-to-7 advantage due to the sharpshooting of Billy Terry, sub center, and Bill Hannon, who scored 7 and 9 points, respectively. Newmyer was outstanding for Friends, scoring two baskets and playing a polished floor game.

St. Albans will open play in the Inter - State Academic Conference League in two weeks. Numbering among the teams are: Friends and Landon, of Washington; St. Paul's and Friends, of Baltimore; St. Andrews, of Middletown, Del.; St. James, of Hagerstown, Md., and Boys Latin, of Baltimore.

eral of the Colonial players deserve to partake freely of the fame that is G. W's. after one of the season's most astounding upsets. Jack Butterworth, assigned the unenviable task of guarding Chuckovits, did about as well as anyone could to halt the one-handed tosses Chuck threw from any and everywhere. But he paid the penalty for his close guarding early in the second half when he was ejected via the personal foul route.

George Garber and Sid Silkowitz—they, too, were heroes of the game. Garber played a near flawless floor game, setting up numerous shots for Faris and Auerbach. Silkowitz was a power on defense, intercepting pass after pass in the first half to feed the ball to his fast-breaking mates.

In a preliminary, the strong George Washington frosh defeated Dickinson Seminary, of Williamsburg, Pa., by a score of 32 to 22.

Md. Freshmen Beat Roosevelt

With but 6 seconds to go, Bud Duvall dropped in a technical foul which gave Maryland freshmen a 31 to 30 win over the Rough Riders of Roosevelt High School yesterday on the latter's gym. Duvall's high scoring kept the Frosh in the game throughout the day's play.

Hymie Perlo, consistent Rider guard, continued his good play, by dropping in five baskets, and one free toss, for 11 points. Roosevelt put up a good battle against the 6-foot Maryland lads, which is considered one of the best frosh teams of recent years at the Old Line institution.

The score at half found the Frosh holding a one-point margin at 16-15. It was a nip-and-tuck battle, and the seven foul shots made by the frosh virtually clinched the game for them. It was a tough game for the Rough Riders to lose, inasmuch as a technical foul cost them the fray, but the Riders put up a much better struggle than had been expected.

He's Up, He's Down Is Gearon, C. U. Boxer; Gives Post Reporter a Lift and an Interview

Busy Young Man Makes Full Use of Every Waking Hour

The rigorous existence of a collegiate boxer has its usual quota of ups and downs for Bill Gearon, Catholic University welterweight, but the happy Harp from Woonsocket, R. I., takes them where they cause the least discomfort—in an elevator.

Young Gearon jockeys one of the Senate Office Building's super-ultra modern lifts every day from 5:30 to 11 p. m., and likes it. From 9 a. m. to 3 p. m he lives the ordinary life of a student, and in his spare time he does a pretty good job of fighting in the 145-pound class for Coach Eddie LaFond.

Your reporter talked to the personable youngster yesterday in what is probably one of the oddest interviews on record—in a busy elevator. In between floors we pieced together a bit of Gearon's past history; between more floors heard the story of his young boxing career, and between the entrance and exit of passengers—many of the national figures in our political life. The Post photographer got a picture of the boy.

It was something like this:

"Going up . . up. Well, if you really want to know, I'm from Woonsocket. Yes, lived there all my life. Out . . . anybody out, second floor. Take the first corridor to your right, madam . . . Down. Step back please . . . all the way back.

"I like boxing, sure; it's good exercise, and I need some exercise. Subway . . . watch your step, please. Yes, sir, this is the subway . . . No, I've never boxed before . . . Well, I did have a pair of gloves on when I was two years old . . . No, sir; his office is on the fourth floor. I'll take you up . . . But I never really boxed until this year.

"Going down . . . what floor, please? . . . Good evening, Senator.

Heck, I don't want my picture in the paper, the other fellows will think I'm a publicity hound . . . Watch the door, please . . ."

The interview proceeded in that vein for the first 15 or 20 trips. Finally, the photographer, Irving Schlossenberg, a little dizzy at this juncture, instead of snapping pictures insisted on asking questions.

"When you hit an opponent, do you say, 'Going down,'" he inquired. Gearon quite properly ignored the remark as Senators Bennett Clark and Walter George invaded the lift. And that reminds us that the Senators have a special buzz for service, and when they ring things happen.

We were traveling downward for about the thirtieth time when the code call buzzed. Gearon had about a half dozen passengers on this particular trip, and had just passed the second floor, headed for the basement. Bill threw the machine into reverse, slammed on the juice and the whole crowd went tearing up to the fourth floor for the splons.

We had slid past the third floor for the fifty-ninth time when Gearon got around to telling us about his busy day. Briefly, it's up at 7:30 o'clock in the morning. He does his roadwork in a hurried sprint to make breakfast before the doors close at 7:50 o'clock. First class is 8:30, and he's in the classroom like any other pre-medical student until at least 3 p. m.

Out of class again he hustles over to the gym and gets into ring togs for a workout. Usually the lad works alone and does no boxing because other members of the team do not report until after 4 o'clock. Infrequently LaFond bestirs his rheumatic self enough to go three or four rounds with Gearon, and that represents his lone chance to brush up on timing and perfecting punches. LaFond, he grinned, is a swell target.

'Old' Tactics Still Win for 'Phog' Allen

F. C. "PHOG" ALLEN

His Kansas Teams Taught to Score On Foes' Errors

By the Associated Press.

Lawrence, Kans., Jan. 31.—Atop windswept Mount Oread, the consistent capital of college basketball, is a man who sticks to horse and buggy coaching tactics—and makes others like it.

Dr. Forrest C. (Phog) Allen, although as modern and intense as a 1939 jitterbug, keeps his Kansas University Jayhawks winning titles with tricks used when pa and ma danced the dreamy waltzes of 1905.

Successful? Twenty-two of his 28 teams have won conference championships. In 28 years his team won 322 games and lost only 70. He is so good he overcame his two sons' natural doubts of a parent's wisdom and made them playing stars.

The advent of the 10-second rule and the 3-second law and its subsequent modification of the post play sent other coaches to athletic apothecaries for new "system builders."

Not so the doctor of Mount Oread. His quintets kept winning on the theory "a team never won a game in its life—its opponents lost it through errors in fundamentals and poor judgment."

Roguish Girl, $4.40 Choice, Draws Out in Hialeah Stretch Drive

Pretty Pet Runs Second In Feature

Floragina Is Third; Longshots, Favorites Have Innings on Florida's Program

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 31.—Benjamin Deutch's speedy but unreliable Roguish Girl began her winter campaign with an easy victory in the 7-furlong Kissimmee Purse here this afternoon. Away from competition since she refused to break in the Lady Baltimore Handicap at Pimlico November 3, the well-named mare got off with her four rivals today and clicked by a length and a half, with Eddie Arcaro sitting still. The daughter of Roguish Eye was a $4.40 for $2 choice in the event for fillies and mares.

Pretty Pet, in M. Leon's silks, was second by two lengths, while E. C. Roth's Floragina was a tired third. False Point finished fourth and Shangay Lily last. The time was 1:23 4-5.

Roguish Girl, which displayed excellent form in some of her 1938 stake engagements, is an eligible for the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup March 4. The 6-year-old campaigner gets in that fixture with 111 pounds.

False Point, a disappointing second choice, was first to leave the stalls. However, the Jamestown filly quickly gave way to Roguish Girl, which Arcaro urged into a narrow advantage, and the fleet Floragina. The latter kept alongside the eventual winner into the last furlong before cracking. Roguish Girl's class asserted itself and the veteran drew away. Pretty Pet beat tired horses for the place award.

Joseph E. Widener, president of the Miami Jockey Club, scored his first victory of the meeting in the first race, a 3-furlong test for maiden juveniles. The international sportsman was represented by two first-time starters, Roman and Acquin. The former clicked by two lengths in the fast time of 0:33 2-5 and paid $6.20 for $2. Halcyon Boy was a fast closing second, a head before Wake Robin.

The latter and Roman vied for the early lead. Wake Robin tired but Roman pulled into the clear in easy fashion. Halcyon Boy and Wake Robin finished well ahead of the others. Unico, a very slight choice over the Widener pair, never could improve over fifth position.

Don Meade, who went winnerless the previous day, regained winning form astride the $12.80-for-$2 chance Black Arrow in the second dash. After the faster beginners had raced themselves into defeat, Meade brought Black Arrow along in the stretch and guided the gelding over the line four lengths clear of Velvet Mask. Blue Marvel, the favorite, was third, a length behind. Velvet Mask was used up running with Crimea. He was easy prey for the fast-closing Black Arrow, which turned the 6 furlongs in 1:12 flat.

Registering his second winner of the day and his thirty-fifth of the meeting, Don Meade pumped Silent Witness home in the 1 1-16 miles turf course event, the combination paying $10.20. Brown Ben trailed the victor by three lengths, while Jean C. was beaten a like margin for secondary honors.

VELVET MASK, a forward factor and saving ground early, came around CRIMEA when straightened into the stretch, assumed a brief lead, but was not equal to the winner. BLUE MARVEL, appearing sore going to the post, went prominently on the outside all the way, held on gamely when placed to a drive and outlasted GOLD KNIGHTESS. The latter cut the corner entering the stretch, responded to punishment and would have been third in another stride.

THE SWARD went in nearest pursuit of the leader throughout, but the final test came and he faltered when that lone enough to withstand SPIN ON'S bid. Col. Winn, of Derby Fame, Tells Of Uncertainties of Roulette

No. 2 Failed to Come Up for 7 Hours but Finally Made Good

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 31.—It's a bit more than 35 years since Col. Matt J. Winn, who made the Kentucky Derby a world-famous racing classic, has placed a bet on a horse.

Somebody asked the colonel if he ever had encountered a crooked wheel.

"Not to my knowledge," he answered. "But I have gone up against wheels occasionally that might have caused some people to become skeptical about their honesty. As, for instance, some years ago I sat down at a wheel at 9 at night. I played No. 2 for more than seven hours. I don't know how many times the wheel whirled and stopped during that time. One tabulator said it was 975, but that seems like a lot of action for a wheel in seven hours. Perhaps 500 is closer.

"I played No. 2 with every turn—and it never came up. Seven straight hours. The law of averages should have brought that number up at least 13 times. But it never came up from 9 at night until 4 in the morning, and I confess to having had a slight financial headache.

"Well, sir, at 4 a. m., a lady who had been in our party, and who had been playing at another table, came over, asked me about my luck and when I told her I had been playing No. 2 for seven hours, and that it never had won, she turned to the croupier and asked:

"'May I make a few spins?' The man obliged. The lady spun the ball—and up came No. 2. She twirled it again, and No. 2 repeated. The croupier said he guessed that he would resume spinning. He spun, and for the third straight time, up came No. 2.

"I had been making plays around No. 2—playing the 1 and 3 and adjacent numbers. On the next spin up came No. 1, then followed No. 3 and then, for the fourth time in six spins, No. 2, which had not appeared for seven consecutive hours, made its fourth appearance. Right there I cashed in—a winner on the night. In less than ten minutes I had won back more than I had lost in seven hours.

"Perhaps that's the answer as to the honesty of roulette wheels—and the strange whims of gambling fortune."

Newest Florida Track Starts Racing Today

Gulfstream Park, Costing $1,400,000 Built in 2 Months by Young Horning

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Fla., Jan. 31.—Gulfstream Park, third horse track in the Miami vicinity, opens a 40-day meeting tomorrow in the face of the only betting slump in six racing seasons here.

For a month the new $1,400,000 plant will operate in competition with Joseph E. Widener's well-established Hialeah Park, which recorded a 4 per cent decrease from last year in its first 18 days of wagering. The mutuel play was off 5 per cent for hte fall meeting at Tropical Park, which reopens on March 6.

Built in two months by 28-year-old John C. Horning on a former tomato patch bordering the four-lane Federal highway, 15 miles north of Miami, Gulfstream Park was ready for the opening although a portion of the grandstand was not complete. About 6,000 seats were available in the grandstand, 2,000 more in the completed clubhouse terrace.

Racing Secretary Fred Burton announced a full eight-race program featured by the $1,000 Inaugural Handicap, in which top weight of 115 pounds was assigned to Townsend B. Martin's Galapas, Longchamps Farm's Shoulder Arms and A. C. Calhoun's Bigey. Nine other thoroughbreds were named for the 5½-furlong sprint.

A supporting $800 allowance race at a mile and 1 furlong listed Dneiper as the favorite in a field of six.

The other six races, all $700 claiming events, were well filled and a substitute field was named.

With more than 500 horses on the grounds, Gulfstream was assured of plenty of material. Another 200 racers are expected and the track began refusing stable reservations three days ago.

Never before in Florida and rarely in American racing annals have two tracks run at the same time in the same vicinity for more than a brief period.

Brewers Play 'Free Game' Here Tonight

Berger in Line-Up Against Jersey Reds Aids Birthday Fund

Some sort of record for magnanimity will be set tonight at Heurich gym, where Chris Heurich, jr., sponsor of Washington's entry in the American Basketball League, the Brewers, opens the doors of his auditorium to the public and asks absolutely no admission fee to a game between the Brewers and the Jersey Reds, defending champions in the loop. The game starts at 8:30.

Although no admission will be levied, Heurich takes this opportunity to help swell the President's birthday infantile paralysis fund. A collection box will be near the entrance to the gym, and any spectator wishing to contribute to the worthy cause may do so. No obligation is attached, however.

As a special feature of the basketball match Louis (Bozie) Berger, former Maryland U. star and now big league ball player, will make a brief appearance on the floor in Heurich's lineup. Before the professional match an outstanding amateur league clash will be staged, District Firemen meeting the former high school stars of Dapper Dan.

In the featured role on the Jersey Red five will be Phil Rabin, leader of the American League in scoring for the past three years. Rabin at present is out front with 221 points, 33 points better than Micky Schonfeld, Heurich's high point man. Schonfeld is third-ranking in the league.

Schwert, New To Congress, Baseball Vet

From Penn, Schwert went directly to the Yankees, breaking in under Manager Frank Chance, whom, he recalled, was not one to refer to a spade by any other term. His vituperative remarks singed your ears and made you feel lower than a rookie pitcher's batting average. Several times Schwert's ears burned and his spirits ebbed because Mr. Chance favored him with some choice remarks concerning his ability.

Ed Sweeney and Leslie Nunamaker took care of the Yankee catching, so the college-bred rookie had few opportunities behind the bat in regular games. Nor did the close-mouthed veterans of those days—fearful of their jobs, make any effort to coach him in smart play. It was by observation and remarks he overheard that Schwert picked up his knowledge of "inside" baseball.

Finds Bench Hard

His two seasons on the Yankee bench did not appease the youngster's appettie for action, however, and after deciding on a business career, he asked club officials to place him with an Eastern team where he might play regularly one season before quitting organized baseball. So in 1916 he went to Newark, coming under the management of Frank Tinney. It was an eventful season, fraught with disaster for the Bears, whose injuries mounted with each game. Before the season ended Schwert had performed at every position, but pitching, and acquitted himself with honor.

The year after he was a full fledged businessman, but still getting in a few hours of baseball in his spare-time. He almost ruined his health, as a matter of fact, trying to operate the business and play ball. He was active 14 and 20 hours daily, and the grind eventually took a heavy toll of weight and vitality. Then came the war.

Schwert enlisted in the Navy, and soon found himself commissioned an ensign and on his way to the Naval Academy for an intensive course of instruction. He served in the pay corps at Bremerton Navy Yard, Puget Sound, and later on the U. S. S. West Meade. The conflict ended undramatically enough for him, aboardship on high seas transporting 3,000 tons of flour to the A. E. F.

His life pursued a normal course until the tag end of the 1921 baseball season, when an emergency call from the Buffalo Club brought him out from behind the counter and placed him back behind the bat. All three Buffalo catchers, it seems, were injured, and Schwert was drafted for the last 21 games of the season. He was the league sensation, batting over .500 for the brief stretch, and playing brilliantly behind the plate. The club would not hear of him retiring, and Schwert, to tell the truth, was reluctant to abandon the diamond for good.

Strike Compromise

He struck a compromise with Buffalo and signed for the 1922 home games. It wasn't such a good ideo, and his play and business both suffered. He decided to give up organized baseball for good, and devote his full time to business and civic affairs. But he couldn't bring himself to sever connections with the game completely and continued with his semipro team.

He played his last official game of baseball in 1924, going in for Angola in an emergency, to pitch against Eddie Madison, only recently returned home from the Phillies. "He beat me," Schwert admitted. "He beat me, 1-0, but it took him 11 innings."

International Flavor Is Added To Ring Matches

A boxing team with a League of Nations complexion will make its debut in Columbus University livery Friday night when the battling Barristers exchange blows with DeSales College in their opening match of the season.

Phil Appell, a Jewish lad, will lead off for Columbus in the 120-pound class, followed in the 127-pound division by Leo Manopulous, a Greek. Buddy Lazear, an Englishman, or Ernie Silva, of Honolulu, will box at 135 pounds. Another Englishman, Jimmy Willis, is available for the 145-pound assignment.

Georgetown Girls Down Bolling, 33-8

Georgetown A. C. girls, members of the Washington Recreation Basketball League, stretched their victory streak to 30 straight games last night, swamping the Bolling Field girls, 33-8, on the loser's court. It was Georgetown's fifth triumph in league play this season.

Anna Honabach, who leads the loop in scoring, continued her fast scoring clip with 13 points, earning point honors for the game. The losers were limited to a pair of field goals in the first half, Georgetown A. C. leading at the intermission, 18-4.

Central to Swim

Central High tankmen travel to Baltimore today for a match with McDonough School swimmers. The meet, carded for the K. of C. pool, will start at 3 p. m.

Technicals were also called on Phil Fox, substitute coach of the Centralites during Jack Ray's illness, and on Tech on the final period for delaying the ball game. Harry Martin and Ornstein split point honors with nine each, and Tech's Eli Blank came in next with eight points.

Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

WRONG APARTMENT: What might happen if a lad walked into the wrong apartment is the theme of a skit dance to be offered by young Social Registerites Austine (Bootsie) McDonnell and Lawrence Baker, jr., when they make their first appearance in Raleigh's Pall Mall Room next Tuesday evening. According to Lawrence, the dance shows how a modern Galahad meets the advances of a pretty girl. Larry will also do a modern tap waltz in solo. A search of night club history reveals that "Bootsie" and Larry are the first young society pair to go in for professional dancing since Daniel Thew Wright, jr., and a chic lass (whose name no one can remember) danced at Meyer Davis' Club Chantecler in the neo-alcoholic days of prohibition.

Hundreds of gray-legged partridges, delicately roasted, will star in the Pall Mall's third hunt dinner this evening. Just why a gray-legged partridge should be snootier than other partridges, we don't know. But we'll take Chef Jarrin's word for it. Songs by Mary de Sibour, dancing by Manor and Mignon (picture above).

PERFECT HOSTESS: Hostess gowns (grandma used to call them tea gowns) will pass in review at the luncheon style show to be given at Lounge Riviera on Saturdya. The mannequins will also display the newest types of make-up and hair-dos and an expert gymnast will demonstrate exercises in posture. If, after all that, you don't look the perfect hostess in your hostess gown,—it'll come under the head of just too bad.

STARS OVER COCKTAILS: Bruce Cabot, one of the most quiet and unpretending of movie celebrities, slipped off by himself to recuperate in the Wardman cocktail lounge before taking up the round of festivities. All of the cocktail sippers recognized him but kindly respected his apparent desire for a couple of quiet moments.

Fiery Lily Damita, searching for husband Errol Flynn, found him (not alone) in the Carlton cocktail lounge, took him out of there fast to keep a White House engagement.

ROMANCE FATALE: Mildred Gaydon, cigarette girl at the Pirates' Den (will be open any day now) is the lass who was with the late Duke of Covadonga, son of Alfonso of Spain, in the fatal motor smasn that was over all front pages a few months ago. Mildred refused to capitalize in any way upon the romance and its attendant publicity.

SERVICE WITH A SMILE: This is "Roger Smith Week" at the various businessmen's service clubs. Singers Jack Kerr and Marco Rosales of the Roger Smith Cafe Caprice are visiting the club luncheons and presenting vocal and instrumental entertainment. The Lions, Kiwanis and Reciprocity Clubs have been visited and the Civitans and Optimists will receive Roger Smith's musical best regards in a couple of days.

HANDWRITING TELLS: Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., is bobbing up all over town these days. New he's had his handwriting analyzed by Roma Reed, the Shoreham's expert, who (the meanie!) won't tell us what she told Cornelius. It seems that character analysis via handwriting is one of Cornelius' hobbies.

Shoreham Special: Mirth and Mack of the Rudy Vallee program, will appear in the Blue Room show next week.

DYNAMITE: That's the word for Karyl Norman's act at Bamboo Gardens. They're calling him back for six or eight encores an evening. It's simply the audience response to masterful trouping. Whether or not you remember Karyl as a singing star of the two-a-day, you have a treat coming to you. He's changed his style completely and successfully, although a flash or two of the erstwhile "creole fashion plate" is received enthusiastically.

Manor and Mignon, who will dance tonight at the "Grey-Legged Partridge Dinner" in the Pall Mall Room

Also at Bamboo are Norden and Fogge who tap surprisingly to classic music and the new Top Hatters, a flock of pretty and agile honeys. Al Norton has taken to singing his announcements.

BOSS IS BACK: Manager Austin Peterson of the Mayfair has returned from a few weeks' vacation in Florida with Mrs. Peterson, who, being a smart lady, decided to stay in the sunny South for a while longer.

CHAMPION SHOW: Lotus is sizzling with the electricity of one of the most dynamic floor shows of the season. Every act is a top-notcher. Johnny Barnes' tap stepping sounds like hail on a tin roof. (Incidentally, Johnny's been walking around in a celestial daze ever since he danced with Eleanor Powell at the Capitol the other evening.) The whirlwind dances of Wardell and Dade are a study in grace, power and polish of performance. Daring and the thrill of danger are contributed by the Virginia Melford Trio. Buddy Shaner sings "Old Folks" and Bill Strickland's Dixielanders contribute dance music with a lift.

BARNES

SELF EDUCATION: You won't believe it, but Lew Berman, singing drummer of the Rainbow Room, never had a drum lesson. Back in the days when Lew was a song plugger, he was told he could have an orchestra job if he could double on the drums. "Sure, I can play the drums," said Lew, who was a pretty brash kid in those days. So he bought himself some drums and went to work; has been a singing drummer ever since.

HOUR GLASS CALENDAR: There'll be "surprise entertainment" at Hour Glass the first of next week . . . The new "monkey bar" will be finished by next Tuesday or Wednesday . . . and probably a style revue of evening wear next Wednesday afternoon.

SWING VIRTUOSO: Ken Fisher, of the Hi Hat Jackets, can play the bass like a guitar or upside down. One would think it would be simpler to stand on his head than to stand the bass on its head.

PHILANTHROPIST: Originator of the properly celebrated double cocktails in the Uptown cocktail lounge is Mixologist Bill Monroe, who believes in mass production and says, "I just don't like to mix little old single portion drinks."

'Cash on Barrel Head' Demanded, WPA Carpenter Testifies

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan. 31.—"Cash on the barrelhead" was demanded of WPA workers to finance an Albuquerque election campaign, a gray-haired WPA carpenter testified today at the trial of 35 defendants charged with conspiring to play politics with the New Mexico WPA.

Arthur Campbell told from the witness stand of a meeting of WPA timekeepers and foremen, which Government witnesses said was organized for the purpose of capturing "the city hall" for United States Senator Dennis Chavez in a bitter rivalry between Chavez and the then Gov. Clyde Tingley.

At the meeting, Campbell related, it was decided to assess everyone making more than $48 a month—laborer's pay—the sum of $4 to go into the campaign war chest for the City Charter League, a campaign organization supported by Senator Chavez.

"I told them I would be glad to help out, but needed a little time to pay it in installments," Campbell testified.

"Joe Sandoval (a defendant) said there would be no installments, it was cash on the barrel head."

Walter Oglesby, a WPA worker, testified one of the defendants told assembled supervisory workers that "the Senator already has the post-office and the Federal Building, and we want to help him get the city hall."

4th Quarter Steel Corp. Net Rises Sharply

$4,394,454 Profit Against 3d Period Loss Of $5,847,791

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 31.—United States Steel Corporation today reported for the final three months of 1938 net income of $4,394,454, compared with a deficit of $5,847,791 in the preceding three months. In the final three months of 1937, net income was $4,577,983.

For the full year 1938, the corporation reported a deficit of $7,755,914, compared with 1937 net income of $94,944,358, equal to $8.01 a share on the common stock.

Directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the preferred stock, payable February 20 to stock of record February 3. The fourth quarter income was equivalent to $1.22 a share on the preferred stock, compared with $1.27 on the senior issue in the comparable 1937 period.

Stettinius Statement

E. R. Stettinius jr., chairman, said that as a result of better demand, earnings in the fourth quarter, while insufficient to cover the full quarterly preferred dividend, reflected an improvement over those of the preceding three quarters of the year. Only in three of the depression years during the last 10 were the tonnages shipped lower than the tonnage in 1938, he said.

During the first four weeks of January shipments averaged approximately 47 per cent of capacity compared with 32 per cent a year ago.

Plant expenditures for 1938 approximated $66,800,000, against total capital outlay of approximately $133,600,000 in 1937. The corporation pointed out that its new $60,000,000 Irwin plant in the Pittsburgh district had been completed and that the unexpended balance out of appropriations for property additions on January 1, this year, approximated $22,000,000.

The average number of employes on the pay roll in 1938 declined to 202,108 from 261,293 in 1937.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube

Youngstown, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).—Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., today reported a loss of $658,933.87 for 1938 in a preliminary earning statement. The loss, after the deduction of all charges but before preferred dividends which were paid for the year, compares with a net profit of $12,190,648.64 in 1937 and $10,564,510 for 1936. The statement indicated that fourth quarter earnings resulted in a net profit of $90,108, compared with a net loss of $727,546 in the third quarter and net profit of $1,696,022 in the last quarter of 1937.

Inland Steel

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—Inland Steel Co. and subsidiaries today reported consolidated net income for 1938 of $4,916,203, after all deductions, subject to final audit. This was equal to $3.12 a share on 1,577,005 shares of capital stock outstanding, and compared with 1937 net income of $12,665,317, equal to $8.05 a share. For the final three months of 1938, net income was $1,759,785, after all deductions, compared with $867,570 net in the final 1937 quarter. The company declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the capital stock, payable March 1 to stockholders of record February 14. The dividend equaled that paid in the preceding quarter.

Lead Price Advanced

New York, Jan. 31.—Leading sellers of lead advanced the price .10 of a cent a pound to 4.85 cents. It had been priced at 4.75 cents since January 24. Last year's highest price was 5.10 cents, established September 19 and maintained nearly six weeks.

Stocks Advance on Hitler Speech Declaration Held Rough but Reassuring Bonds and Most Commodities Also Gain

New York, Jan. 31.—Relief that Hitler's speech before the Reichstag Monday was more moderate than an anxious world had been led to expect resulted in a continuation today of the improvement in security markets. While the language was rough, it was noted that the German dictator reassured those who feared he might have designs on Holland or other parts of the world which are not German and he was far from being precise in those demands he did make. Nerves are calmer as a result and the apprehension of those who hold securities has been lessened perceptibly.

The better tone was not confined to our own markets. There was more reassurance in Amsterdam, Berlin, London and Paris and the improvement there spread to the better grade bonds and most of the commodities. On the big board the volume of business was heavy in the opening hour and prices advanced far enough to encourage some major profit taking operations in the later dealings. The close was good and left the composite average up 0.69 point for the day. More than 40 per cent of the day's volume of 1,121,790 shares was crowded into the first hour.

The more temperate tone of Herr Hitler's address did not lessen the demand for aviation shares, four issues of which were included in today's list of 15 most active stocks. The Street read with interest the statement made before the French Chamber of Deputies by Air Minister Guy La Chambre that France is receiving the "best airplanes of the United States" and that "France owes this fact to President Roosevelt." It was noted that members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, investigating such sales to France, were called into conference by the President and from this it was presumed that the industry can continue to count upon such purchases without Congressional interference. Apparently France can continue to receive our best planes even though the President a few years ago warned against sales of war materials based on the plea of keeping our plants busy.

Curtiss Wright made slow upward progress on sales of 26,500 shares. North American aviation and Bendix gained fractional but Sperry suffered from profit taking.

U. S. Steel a Leader

Steels were prominent on the advance, the day's most active stock being United States Steel which closed up 2 points and which, after the close of the marke, reported a net income for the final quarter of 1938 of $4,394,454 against a deficit of $5,847,791 in the preceding quarter, while insufficient to cover the full quarterly preferred dividend requirements, the regular payment was ordered as expected. Only in three of the depression years of the last 10 were tonnages shipped lower than in 1938, E. R. Stettinius, jr., chairman, stated. National Steel advanced 2¾ and Bethlehem and Republic made smaller gains.

Utilities kept up with the general trend but without any special demonstration. Chrysler was a leader in the motor division, adding 1¼ while Anaconda and Nickel were well liked among the metals. Some of the best gains included, Johns Manville, 3; Westinghouse, 3; American Smelting, 1⅜; American Can, 1⅞ and Nickel Plate, 1⅜.

Bond Market Higher

Sharp gains in all classes of listed bonds reflected the market relief today over the clearer international skies. United States Treasury issues regained at a bound all the ground lost last week, and six issues established fresh highs. Medium-priced domestic rails and other speculative bonds were in good demand and poor supply. Foreign dollar bonds showed gains to 5 points. Turnover was only $7,400,000, largely because of the scarcity of offerings.

Longest datings of United States Government bonds were in best demand, in the high grade sections, and gains of 1-32 to 16-32 points resulted. It was in the long bonds that new highs were recorded Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also did well. Fractional gains appeared in best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds despite the imminence of the large flotation for North American Co.

Intermediate railroad issues were marked 1 to 3 points higher, with buying institutional in some of the best grades. Borderline carrier bonds improved sharply, and the default group likewise did well. Holding company bonds and industrial convertibles improved with their related equities. Local traction securities and communication bonds were other strong spots.

German government, municipal and corporate bonds moved up 1 to 5 points on the better international atmosphere, and Italians were almost equally strong. Belgian, Czech and Polish bonds followed the upward path, with the British empire securities of Canada and Australia also in request. Chileans were weak among the Latin-Americans, owing to the ever mounting earthquake damage, but others were firm.

GROWTH CURVE OF INDUSTRIES

This chart shows how an industry's life span has four stages: (1) development, illustrated by the Television industry; (2) rapid growth, by Chemical business; (3) stability, by Steel; (4) new development or decline, by Glass or Coal. Where on the chart would you put the industries in which you hold securities?

"Timing" Your Investments

Correct timing in investing means more than buying stocks when they are low and selling them when they are high. Successful investment timing must consider a third phase: "lifetime." This is pictured above.

Vital Questions

The important question for an investor to ask is: How old is the industry and in what period of its own industrial life is it? These divisions of an industry's life span are roughly four: (1) development (2) rapid growth (3) stability and (4) new development or decline.

Big Profit Time

From the investment viewpoint your capital should be distributed mainly in those industries which are in the period of middle growth. They are beyond the promotional problems and yet are still not approaching the saturation dangers. It is the profit zone for the corporation and its stockholders. It is the correct location for the bulk of your securities.

Your Holdings

Is your capital diversified over a reasonably broad range? Are you well represented among industries which are in the period of greatest growth? Have you kept the majority of your funds out of raw industries on the one hand, and out of fading industries on the other?

34 Years Experience

As every seasoned investor knows: It is impossible for anybody to supervise successfully all securities. Therefore we focus our efforts on certain issues which offer the real opportunities. We have broken all precedents by offering you a Supervised Investment Service for $120 a year.

Supervision Pays!

On our List are some 250 securities distributed over about 30 different industries concentrated in the most favorable zone of the above chart. Constant Supervision brings you the benefits of our thirty-four years of investment experience.

1938 Results

The practical results of such concentration have been impressive. The recent market advance is a typical test period. The Babson Selections have leaped 54% in market value while the Dow-Jones Industrial Average has advanced only 44%; this means Babson clients' profits have been 30% greater than the market average.

THE COMPANY: The North American Company is a public utility holding company, organized in 1890 under the laws of New Jersey, and owns stocks, bonds and other securities of subsidiaries (including public utility holding companies) and other corporations. The principal operating subsidiaries of the Company are electric utility companies; the principal cities served are St. Louis, Milwaukee, Cleveland and Washington, D. C. Certain subsidiaries are also engaged in other activities, including the furnishing of transportation, gas and heating services and the mining of coal. The Company has substantial minority investments in the common stocks of Pacific Gas and Electric Company and The Detroit Edison Company and controls North American Light & Power Company and Capital Transit Company. The investment in Pacific Gas and Electric Company and The Detroit Edison Company comprises a substantial part of the total investment of the Company and dividends received from such companies have constituted a substantial part of the Company's income.

The North American Company owns no plants or real property. Property and plant of utility subsidiaries include land, structures and equipment required in the electric light and power and auxiliary steam heating business, local and interurban transportation business and gas business. Substantially all of such properties and plants are subject to mortgages and other liens for the most part securing indebtedness of the respective subsidiaries.

The Company has registered as a holding company under the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 which Act, among other things, imposes upon the Securities and Exchange Commission the duty to require steps to be taken to limit the operation of a holding company system to a single integrated public utility system (or, under certain conditions, one or more such systems) and to simplify the structure of holding company systems. In response to a request of the Commission addressed to a number of public utility holding companies for the presentation of plans, even though tentative, looking towards compliance with the provisions of the Act above referred to, the Company, under date of November 1, 1938, submitted such a tentative plan. The Commission has advised the Company that it would treat the plan as confidential, and the details of the plan have not been disclosed to the underwriters or in the registration statement or offering prospectus. For the purpose of this newspaper prospectus the Company makes no representation that the tentative plan complies with the requirements of the Act, or as to the position of the Commission with respect thereto, or as to the effect of the Act upon the operations of the Company and its subsidiaries.

Cumulative Preferred Stock, $50 par value, into 5,606,678 shares of Serial Preferred Stock, $50 par value, all of one class; to constitute the previously authorized Six Per Cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock as the initial series (designated Preferred Stock, 6% Series) of such Serial Preferred Stock; to change the authorized shares of Common Stock, without par value, into shares of Common Stock, $10 par value; and to change the stock provisions in certain other respects.

As of June 30, 1938, the Company's funded debt and capital stock outstanding in the hands of the public, exclusive of amounts held in the treasury, consisted of $23,913,000 principal amount of debentures (which are to be redeemed), 606,359 shares of Six Per Cent. The funded debt and capital stock of the Company's subsidiaries consolidated outstanding in the hands of the public on June 30, 1938 consisted of $314,721,000 principal amount of funded debt (exclusive of $1,640,000 payable within one year), $128,099,512.50 par or stated value of preferred stock, and minority interests in common stock of subsidiaries consolidated amounting to $8,786,278.17 (exclusive of surplus applicable to such common stock). As of June 30, 1938, after giving effect to the issue and sale of these securities and the application of the proceeds therefrom, such funded debt and capital stock consisted of $272,156,000 principal amount of funded debt (exclusive of $1,640,000 payable within one year), $93,270,512.50 par or stated value of preferred stocks, and minority interests in common stock of subsidiaries consolidated amounting to $8,786,278.17 (exclusive of surplus applicable to such common stock). The accounts of North American Light & Power Company and of Capital Transit Company are not consolidated with the accounts of the Company and its subsidiaries consolidated.

APPLICATION OF PROCEEDS: The net proceeds to the Company from the sale of these securities will amount to a minimum of $104,137,056.97 and a maximum of $104,395,346.97, in each case exclusive of accrued interest and dividends and after deducting underwriting commissions and estimated expenses. The net proceeds, together with treasury funds of the Company to the extent necessary, are to be applied to the redemption of the outstanding debentures of the Company and of North American Edison Company (a subsidiary holding company) and the preferred stock of the latter company; the total redemption price of such debentures and preferred stock is $105,628,810, exclusive of accrued interest and dividends. After such redemptions, North American Edison Company will be dissolved and its assets transferred in liquidation to the Company, which will assume its liabilities existing at the time of such transfer.

DEBENTURES: All of the Debentures are to be issued under an Indenture to Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, as Trustee, and under an indenture supplemental thereto, both dated February 1, 1939. Debentures of the 3½% Series due 1949, 3¾% Series due 1954, and 4% Series due 1959 are limited in aggregate principal amount to $20,000,000, $25,000,000, and $25,000,000, respectively. The Debentures are not secured but the Company covenants in the Indenture not to secure other indebtedness of the Company (with certain exceptions) without securing the Debentures equally and ratably with such other indebtedness. Additional debentures of other series, and other funded debt, without limit as to amount, may be issued if consolidated income (computed as provided in the Indenture) for 12 months within the preceding 15 months is equal to at least 1½ times total annual consolidated interest charges and subsidiary preferred dividend requirements (both computed as provided in the Indenture) on total consolidated debt and subsidiary preferred stock to be outstanding after the issuance of such additional debentures or funded debt. In certain cases of refunding, such income requirement need not be complied with. The Supplemental Indenture contains a provision prohibiting the payment of dividends (other than dividends paid in Common Stock) on the Common Stock after the date of such Indenture, if the aggregate of the dividends so paid would exceed the amount of "net income of the Company, after provision for dividends on preferred stock, accumulated after December 31, 1938" (as defined), plus $6,000,000. Certain provisions of the Indenture and indentures supplemental thereto may be modified as provided in the Indenture.

The brief outline of such Indenture provisions as are contained herein is subject to the more detailed statements in the Indenture and Supplemental Indenture, both filed as exhibits to the registration statement and hereby incorporated by reference.

PREFERRED STOCK, 5¾% SERIES: This is to be a series of the Serial Preferred Stock, which is issuable in one or more series in a total authorized amount of 5,606,678 shares. The Certificate of Organization, as amended, includes provisions to the effect that: the holders of shares of Serial Preferred Stock and Common Stock have one vote per share for all purposes, and without regard to class except as stated below or as otherwise required by statute; the Serial Preferred Stockholders, as a class and without regard to series, are entitled to elect one-fourth of the Board of Directors, and the Common Stockholders, as a class, are entitled to elect the remaining directors, unless and until dividends on the Serial Preferred Stock are in default in an amount equivalent to twelve full quarterly dividends, in which case, and until all dividends in default on the Serial Preferred Stock are paid, the Serial Preferred Stockholders, as a class and without regard to series, are entitled to elect the smallest number of directors necessary to constitute a majority of the full Board of Directors, and the Common Stockholders, as a class, are entitled to elect the remaining directors; certain amendments to the Certificate of Organization relating to the Serial Preferred Stock require a two-thirds class vote of the Serial Preferred Stock and, in certain instances, of separate series thereof; the Serial Preferred Stock has no preemptive rights.

The Board of Directors is authorized to issue the unissued balance of the authorized Serial Preferred Stock as Preferred Stock, 6% Series, as Preferred Stock, 5¾% Series, or as stock of other series and to fix, for each such other series, the distinctive serial designation, the annual dividend rate, the redemption price, the distributive amount per share payable on dissolution or any distribution of assets, and the terms or amount of any sinking fund. All shares of Serial Preferred Stock are to be of equal rank with each other, regardless of series.

The brief outline of such stock provisions as are contained herein is subject to the more detailed statements in the Certificate of Organization, as amended, filed as an exhibit to the registration statement and hereby incorporated by reference.

Wheat Drops With Fading Of War Fear

Fall Averages 1 Cent
Forecasts of Rain
Corn Prices Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—World wheat values dropped more than a cent a bushel today as political and financial circles evaluated the Hitler speech and professed to see less danger of war in its implications.

With securities markets strong, grains followed the familiar pattern of easing political tension. Chicago wheat lost ⅞@1⅛ cent; Liverpool, ¾@1⅝; Rotterdam, ⅞@1, and Winnipeg, ⅞@1. Buenos Aires was the only steady major market, closing unchanged to ⅛ higher. Some dealers took their cue from Hitler, while others continued to observe caution pending the Mussolini speech.

Aiding the wheat price downturn was a forecast of more precipitation over the domestic grain belt. Early in the session, however, the market found support at around 69 for May wheat and later at 68⅝.

After dropping as much as 1⅛ cent, wheat here closed ⅞@1⅛ lower than yesterday; May, 68¾@68⅝; July, 68⅜@68⅝. Corn; ⅝@⅞ down; May, 50⅝@50½; July, 51⅝. Oats unchanged to ⅜ lower. Rye, 1 cent off. Lard, 5@8 down.

Cotton Closings Are Irregular

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Trading on differences was the principal activity in today's cotton market with the final price level 5 points higher to 3 lower.

All positions remained huddled in a relatively narrow range, but there was a reversal of previous day's trends in that some nearby months pushed ahead a little while the new crop October felt a little pressure.

Trading incentive was held in check, according to brokers, by conflicting reports from Washington concerning the wishes of Cotton Belt Senators and Agriculture Department authorities for farm legislation affecting cotton.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil dropped 2 to 5 points today in sympathy with easier lard, hog and cotton quotations. Modest early gains were lost on trade house selling, presumably against crude oil purchases in Texas. Sales totaled 70 lots. March closed 6.90@6.93; May, 6.96@7.07; July, 7.16; September, 7.20@7.35.

Crude oil was quoted 5¾@5⅞ in the Southeast and Valley and 5⅜@5¾ Texas.

Mutual Life Of N. Y. Marks 96th Birthday

5 Billions Paid Out
1 Million Policies
1.3 Billion Assets

Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York observes its ninety-sixth anniversary today, celebrating the issuance of its first policy on February 1, 1843.

Since this first policy was issued, the company has paid policyholders and their beneficiaries, or accumulated for them, more than $5,000,000,000, which is over $600,000,000 more than the amount received in premiums. It had insurance in force at the end of 1938 of nearly $3,800,000,000 and represented by more than 1,000,000 policies. It had assets at the end of 1938 amounting to more than $1,300,000,000, and in 1938 issued more than 94,000 policies, representing new insurance amounting to more than $260,000,000.

To observe this occasion, the Washington branch office, under Thomas P. Morgan, jr., manager, holds a convention of its representatives today in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building. Mr. Morgan has appointed Paul H. Primm, one of the most successful underwriters of the Washington office, chairman of the convention. Mr. Emanuel A. Hyman will speak on "The Mutual Life Contract in Competition," a resume of material actually used in closing cases that has helped him to lead the Baltimore area for the years 1938, 1937, and 1936 in paid-for business, and to qualify every year for the Field Club Convention since joining the company in July, 1934. Mr. Hyman's service to his policyholders includes analysis of contracts and practices of companies and he will answer questions from the floor.

Other Speakers

Other speakers will be from the faculty of the Life Insurance Institute of the District of Columbia: William R. Williamson, A. M., Wesleyan University, and Fellow of American Actuarial Society, will speak on "Principles and Practices of Life Insurance." Leopold V. Freudberg, A. B., George Washington University and LL. B., Washington College of Law, will talk on "Wills Trusts and Estates." Joseph A. Marr, LL. B., Georgetown University and Charters Life Underwriter, will talk on "Taxation and Business Insurance."

In the evening there will be a business meeting and dinner at the Russian Troika Club. The Washington agency of the company is one of the largest life insurance agencies in the city, having $50,000,000 of insurance in force.

Building and Loan League

Commenting on a revival of interest in home ownership throughout the country Representative H. Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, new chairman of the District Committee, House of Representatives, yesterday praised the efforts of the building and loan industry in helping to bring this about. Representative Randolph was principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League at the Raleigh Hotel.

RANDOLPH

President Arthur G. Bishop, of the local league, presented Clarence T. Rice, president of the United States Building and Loan League, who reported the national organization had 9,000 member associations with resources exceeding $6,000,000,000. Other distinguished visitors at the speakers' table included O. K. La Roque, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Morton Bodfish, Chicago, executive vice president of the United States Building and Loan League.

Lawton a Leader

Walter T. Lawton, of the Washington agency, has just been announced as a member of the Leaders Club of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., according to advices from the home office in Newark, N. J.

Mr. Lawton's achievement in leading the H. Lawrence Choate Agency, in addition to qualifying for the company's Leader Club, is particularly notable since he started his work with the company only nine months ago.

Dr. White's Medical Library Given to St. Elizabeths

Donation by Former Superintendent's Widow Announced at Unveiling of His Portrait at Hospital

Secretary Ickes accepted the portrait on behalf of the Department of Interior, which operates the 84-year-old mental institution.

Ickes declared that Dr. White came to St. Elizabeths in 1903 when "psychiatry was still in the groping stage" and in his thirty-fourth year administration developed it "until it came to be widely recognized as perhaps the outstanding mental hospital in the world."

In Washington, Ickes said, Dr. White encountered "a barbarous and antiquated method of commitment of patients, by which a jury trial in a criminal courtroom was compulsory." Dr. White's protests aroused public opinion so that the law was reformed, but only after the doctor's death, the Secretary asserted. Among the late superintendent's works, Secretary Ickes cited changing of the institution's name from Government Hospital for Insane to St. Elizabeths Hospital in 1916; teaching the public that mental disorders were natural phenomena; inauguration of the malarial treatment for general paresis, and interpreting psychiatry to both the medical profession and the public.

Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls Church and chairman of St. Elizabeth's Board of Visitors, presented the portrait. Dr. Winfred Overholser, present superintendent, presided.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Kirsten Flagstad sings with the Philadelphia Orchestra, under the direction of Eugene Ormandy, Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Beethoven-Wagner program: Overture to "Egmont," Symphony No. 7, Scena and Aria. "Ah, Perfido;" Overture to "Die Meistersinger," "Einsam in trueben Tagen" from "Lohengrin," "Du bist der Lenz" from "Die Walkuere," Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde."

A crowded house paid tribute to Kirsten Flagstad last evening when the Philadelphia Orchestra played its third concert of the season in Constitution Hall, and, with due respect to the virtuoso band of musicians, it was quite obvious that the center of attraction was the Norwegian soprano. No one could find fault with that concentration, for the occasion had been arranged for that very purpose; even the program had been built in perspectives leading to the pinnacles of song.

Every whit of the applausive homage tendered Mme. Flagstad was fully deserved, for she is one of the regnant sopranos of this generation. Not only in her splendid endowment of voice but also in her serene poise she embodies the authority of song. Her singing has that deceptive appearance of effortless power which is the distinguishing characteristic of consummate artistry; her strength resides in her utter simplicity and in her reliance upon th jure principles of musical expression.

Not a trace of artificiality marred the dramatic eloquence of her reading of Beethoven's scena and aria, "Ah, Perfido," and the poignancy of emotion never left the plane of dignity. In her treatment of the Wagnerian arias, there was a subtle differentiation in style which marked the change from one impersonation to another. The Elsa of "Einsam in trueben Tagen" was as unmistakable in lineaments as the Sieglinde of "Du bist der Lenz" and the Isolde of "Mild und leise," yet these distinctions in personality were effected without the slightest trick of histrionism.

Eugene Ormandy prepared the way for these vocal climaxes with selections which the orchestra must know by heart; the overture to "Egmont," the A major symphony, and the vorspiel to "Die Meistersinger." The performances of these works were in the richly vestured manner to which the Philadelphians have accustomed us.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Bridge bidding should not be a gamble when such conventions as the Blackwood slam bid for aces and kin are available, but it often is.

Consider the optimism of the North-South players on today's hand. In a duplicate tournament, where, if ever, conservative tactics should be employed they blithely skipped into a no trump slam, using the Blackwood convention more as a feeble alibi than as a legitimate inquiry as to whether six should be attempted or not.

It seems that players will continue to gamble using the very conventions designed to eliminate hazard to bolster their recklessness.

Skillful and daring play, however, often justifies the gambler's bid, turning it from a foolish blunder into a masterful coup.

South pulled his chestnuts out of the fire in today's hand when through the adversary's reluctance to take an ace, and a squeeze play, he managed to fulfill the contract.

West's double had assured him that most of the important cards were in that hand and so South had no illusions as to the success of possible finesses. He hoped however for a little luck and played on that assumption.

He won West's opening heart lead with the king in his own hand and immediately led the ten of clubs toward dummy. When West played small, declarer put on the king, which held the trick. He led a low diamond back, put on the nine from his hand and was happy to see that West's king was forced.

West of course could lay down the ace of clubs and take the setting trick at once but being greedy he hoped for more and doing exactly what South hoped he would he led another heart.

Now all declarer desired was that the spade king lay in the East hand and that the jack was with West. He won the heart with the ace, cleared the diamonds, played the queen of hearts led the heart ten, overtaking with dummy's jack, and played the nine. On this lead West, who had been showing increasing difficulty in discarding, stubbornly clung to his club ace, but was forced to discard down to the jack and one spade.

With a final prayer to the gods of chance, declarer led the deuce of spades from dummy finessed the queen which held, and played the ace which dropped West's jack. The spade ten stood up to win the last and slam-going trick.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

AMONG other big-time remolding of things today, February 1, is the reorganization of the Extension Service in the Agriculture Department. It carries no personnel hazards. Is aimed solely at efficiency. In the words of C. W. Warburton, extension director:

"Farm families today need more than ever to receive from their State and county extension workers basic facts recast and interpreted in a form suitable for their most effective use. They need a rapid service of information about national farm programs. . . ." From this broad policy comes changes principally as follow:

OFFICE of the director, headed by Warburton, with Reuben Brigham as assistant director. Here have been added W. A. Lloyd, C. L. Chambers, and H. W. Gilbertson. As principal technical analysts, they will review State budgets, projects and plans of work. Enlarged appropriations of Federal funds "increase the importance of these duties in the administration of extension work," Warburton stated.

DIVISION of Business Administration, headed by M. M. Thayer, with W. H. Conway as associate chief. Here administrative, fiscal and personnel affairs will be handled.

DIVISION of Field Co-ordination, R. W. Hochbaum, chief. Here will be two sections, one devoted to program planning and organization, with Hochbaum in temporary charge; the other devoted to extension methods studies, under leadership of M. C. Wilson.

DIVISION of Subject Matter, Hochbaum in charge until a permanent chief is obtained. Here will be two sections, the exonomic extension section with H. W. Dixon in charge, and the agricultural and home economics section, headed by S. P. Lyle.

DIVISION of Extension Information, under direction, for the time being, of Reuben Brigham. This division is what its name implies. Its three sections are of motion pictures, which will prepare and distribute films, with Raymond Evans in charge; the Visual Instruction and Editorial Section, which, among other things publishes a national professional extension journal, with Lester A. Schlup in charge; and the Exhibits Section, which prepares exhibits for fairs, expositions and the like. J. W. Hiscox heads this section.

NOTES: Everything would have gone through smoothly enough had Congress not thrown the wrench at the emergency employes, just when the Executive orders were about to have effect. It has made them, in desperation, cast about for all manner of loopholes through which to squeeze to civil service status. One of them called this column, saying: What about this situation—the Executive orders take effect Tuesday at midnight and the Congress never has decided that WPA is out of status. Until WPA is definitely ruled out, by law, don't the Executive orders cover them in?" . . . John E. Dawson was retired yesterday from the office of Indian Affairs for reasons of age, terminating about 49 years of service that permitted him to see the policy of the Government toward the Indian do a complete reverse. He left with gifts and good wishes.

OVER in the Labor Department cafeteria the sound-proofing is nearly completed, in compliance with the request from the employes, speaking through the American Federation of Government Employes. They asked that the floor be made less slippery and that something be done to keep down the uproar. They wanted to eat in peace . . . The Association of Nonclassified Federal Employes (Washington Chapter) meets at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night at 1322 Vermont avenue. They will hear Representative Luther Patrick, of Alabama, discuss the Ramspeck bill to extend the civil service. The association is having a hard fight.

THE Georgia State Society will celebrate the founding of Georgia with a dance at the Shoreham Hotel Saturday night. On the reception committee are Capt. and Mrs. L. C. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Carey R. Sutline, Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Forman, Mr. and Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mr. and Mrs. Carter Barron, Maj. and Mrs. Lloyd Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Andrews and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chappell. Harry L. Brown, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and president of the society, will speak.

ANOTHER invitation is given to Federal employes to participate in the parties that will aid the serum and blood bank. The parties are on Valentine's evening and the Federal bridge leagues are co-operating.

Bob Burns Says—

They're buildin' a new telescope out here in California that's gonna be so powerful it'll bring the moon up to 25 miles from the earth. An' when they do that, it's gonna settle a lot of arguments. We're gonna know, once an' fer all, whether the moon's really made of green cheese. An' we're gonna get a good close-up of the man in the moon. He's been winkin' his eyes at love-makin' couples fer thousands of years. That's a long time fer one man to be night superintendent.

If all the neckin' he's looked at, since the world began, could be put end to end, it would make a giraffe's neck that would stretch up past the star Arcturus, several billion light years away, an' if the giraffe wiggled his ears, he'd brush 'em against Mars on one side an' Venus on the other.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Peter Remembers Too Late

Remembering when just too late,
If then you lose don't call it fate.
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit had left the dear Old Briar-patch. He knew he shouldn't. That is he knew that it was a foolish thing to do. It always is foolish to take a needless risk, and that is just what Peter was doing. He was deliberately leaving safety for uncertainty.

"Supposing you should meet Shadow the Weasel," said Mrs. Peter. "He wears a white coat and now that all the Great World is white you might walk right up to him without seeing him."

"True, my dear. Quite true. But what of it? I will be as safe from him outside the Briar-patch as in it. He is one enemy as much at home here as we are, for he can go anywhere that we can go and a great many places that we can't go," replied Peter.

Mrs. Peter shivered. She always shivers when she thinks of Shadow the Weasel. There are a number of little folk who do the same thing. For his size, Shadow the Weasel causes more shivering than anyone else of whom I know. You know how fear causes people to shiver and shake. That is the kind of shivers that Shadow causes.

So Peter refused to heed Mrs. Peter's advice and left the dear Old Briar-patch. He left it by degrees so to speak. He took a few hops and then sat up to look this way and that way over the snow-covered meadows, even up in the air. Then, hopping a little farther, he stopped to do the same thing over again. You see Peter was being cautious. At least he considered it so.

"If Reddy Fox was anywhere about I could see him so far away that I would have plenty of time to get back to the dear Old Briar-patch," thought Peter. "It would be the same with Old Man Coyote if he should take it into his head to come this way. Everything is so white that they would show up as far off as I can see. I can see Blacky the Crow clear over there in a tree on the edge of the Green Forest. If there was a Hawk there in place of Blacky I would see him just as plainly. I am glad none of them dress in white. Then I wouldn't dare leave the Briar-patch. No sir, I would not. I envy Cousin Jumper his coat. If I had a white coat like his I would go and come as I please. Jumper is lucky."

Peter meant Jumper the Hare, who in winter wears a coat as white as the snow itself. Jumper is also called Snowshoe Rabbit. Peter was making for Farmer Brown's young apple orchard hoping to be able to strip some bark from the trunks of the young trees. Apple bark would be a welcome change of food. Of course if he took the bark all the way around the trunk of a tree he would kill the tree. He didn't know that. Not that it would have made any difference if he had known. To Peter a tree is just a tree, a bush is just a bush, and the bark of young trees and the tender twigs of bushes are intended to keep Rabbits alive through hard winters, of course.

So by the hop and stop method, which is Peter's idea of caution, he drew near to the young orchard. This was surrounded by a fence of woven wire. It was a high fence intended to keep out Lightfoot the Deer, but Peter could slip through between the wires. A corner post appeared to be taller than the other posts. Peter looked straight at it and didn't give it a thought.

"I knew it was safe enough for me to come over here," thought Peter. "There isn't an enemy in sight, and——"

Just then the top of that tallest post came to life. Yes, sir, it came to life. It spread a pair of great broad white wings and Peter began running and dodging for his life. Too late to remember that there was one other enemy wearing white. It was Whitey the Snowy Owl down from the Far North. Now Peter was wishing that he had heeded Mrs. Peter and remained in the Old Briar-patch.

Fr. Lyons Dies At 71; Former G. U. President

Quit Business for Church; Funeral to Be At Boston Friday

Rev. G. W. Lyons

Father Lyons, born in Boston, went into the Jesuit order in 1890. He taught at Georgetown, St. Francis Xavier College, New York, and Boston College before being made president of St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, in 1909.

He became head of Boston College in 1914, serving there until 1919, and held the presidency of Georgetown from 1924 until 1928.

The funeral will be at Boston Friday with a requiem mass at 10 a. m. Burial will follow in the Jesuit Cemetery at Holy Cross College, Worcester.

Father Lyons leaves two brothers, Dr. Joseph V. Lyons, former mamber of the Boston school committee, and Daniel M. Lyons, pardon attorney for the Department of Justice, Washington, and two sisters, both of Boston.

Came Here in 1924.

Father Lyons became president of Georgetown University October 1, 1924, succeeding the Rev. John B. Creeden, S. J. He remained in the executive post until the fall of 1928, when he was transfefred to St. Mary's Church, Boston, as a member of the Jesuit Missionary Band.

Shortly after he was ordained to the priesthood, Father Lyons was appointed president of Gonzaga College here from 1908 to 1909. Four years before then, in 1904, the year he was ordained, he served at Georgetown University for a year as prefect of discipline and director of athletics. That was a period when Georgetown track teams, particularly, were supreme in intercollegiate circles.

Father Lyons served altogether as president of four colleges and universities during an educational career of 32 years that brought him national prominence as an executive and preacher. It is believed no other Jesuit in this country has headed four colleges.

He left Gonzaga to become president of St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, for five years, and in 1914 he was assigned to the presidency of Boston College. It was there that he first gained a national reputation.

Boston College was struggling for existence and Father Lyons lifted it academically and financially into the front ranks of Jesuit colleges in this country. He engaged in a successful endowment drive and was regarded as the father of "Greater Boston College."

When he was assigned to Georgetown, the university had completed the first phase of its own endowment campaign. With his former experiences, Father Lyons undertook the erection of the new North Hall, largest of the dormitories at the Hilltop and erected a new building at Georgetown Hospital for maternity cases.

It was during his administration that plans for the new $1,000,000 medical and dental school building reached maturity. He was transferred to Boston about the time that he proposed building the new school, which now is one of the finest equipped in the country.

Father Lyons was born in Boston, January 31, 1868, and after a brief business career he entered the Society of Jesus in 1900. While preparing for the priesthood pursued graduate studies at the Frederick, Md., novitiate and at Woodstock College, Woodstock, Md., which now is the theological seminary of Georgetown University.

Started as Teacher.

He started his educational career as a teacher of metaphysics and political economy at St. Francis Xavier College, New York. His natural leadership and executive ability soon displayed itself and gradually his career changed from class room to administrative duties.

While at Boston College, Father Lyons formed a stanch friendship with President Calvin Coolidge, then serving as Governor of Massachusetts. This friendship was renewed later in the White House when the educator came to Washington. During the World War period he was drafted by Gov. Coolidge for various war-time activities in the State.

Noted as a pulpit orator, Father Lyons belonged to the select group of Massachusetts men chosen to deliver the Fourth of July oration in Faneuil Hall, Boston. It was an honor in which he always took pride.

During his presidency at Georgetown, Father Lyons was decorated by the Rumanian government with the rank of Commander of the Order of the Star.

Roosevelt's Arms Policy Is Defended

Rep. Smith Praises It Before Democrats Of Connecticut

The President's rearmament program is designed to meet our minimum defense needs, irrespective of foreign policy, Representative J. Joseph Smith (Democrat), of Connecticut, told the Connecticut Democrats in the District of Columbia at their monthly meeting in the Continental Hotel last night.

Failure to keep pace with developments in the science of warfare has made much of our material obsolete, while advances made by other countries make our present air force dangerously small, Representative Smith said. The aim of the program, he continued, is to build up a small army, well-equipped, well-trained, well-manned, and well officered, which is necessary to defend the country even though no attack, even of a preventive nature, is contemplated.

An important item in the program, he pointed out, is the $32,000,000 asked for "educational orders" from private industry. Some items of most critical importance are being made in small quantities now by the firms that will have to make them in large quantities if war should break out, he said.

William F. McKenna, president of the society, was in the chair.

U. S. Aid for Railroads Vital Defense Need, Says Gray

By the Associated Press.

Carl Gray, vice chairman of the board of the Union Pacific Railroad, suggested yesterday that Congress adopt a definite railroad aid policy as a national defense measure.

Testifying at House Interstate Commerce hearings on the Lea transportation bill, Gray said:

"I believe that no major war can be successfully waged by this country without a thoroughly efficient system of railroads in high physical condition.

"We believe that there is no way in which this can be developed and handled except by the same method, authority and jurisdiction over all forms of transportation that offers themselves for public hire."

Gray, a member of President Roosevelt's six-man commission, which last month recommended legislative aids for the railroads, told the committee that it was "a rather singular fact" that Congress had expressed a national policy regarding virtually all forms of transportation except the railroads.

He said development of a transportation system "far beyond the necessities of the United States" had hurt the railroads.

Saying that "monopolistic tendencies in the transportation business long since had disappeared, Gray added:

"We (the railroads) are in need of assistance as much as any other form of transportation . . . Transportation presents just about as confused a situation as can very well be conceived."

Meanwhile, R. S. Marshall, vice president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, told the Interstate Commerce Commission that the Erie Railroad roerganization proceeding offered an "appropriate opportunity" for consolidation of the Erie with the C. & O. and other lines.

Testifying at a hearing on the Erie reorganization, Marshall said he was not "suggesting" C. & O.-Erie Consolidation, although he thought it should be brought about.

The C. & O. controls the Erie and the New York, Chicago, & St. Louis (Nickel Plate.)

Anti-Embargo Group Claims Congress Aid

Lawyers Committee Denies Lifting of Ban Would Involve U. S.

The Lawyers Committee on American Relations with Spain claimed last night to have discovered a favorable "general reaction" among members of Congress to lifting the Spanish embargo, but described Secretary of State Hull as still noncommitttal, with no definite action contemplated.

Local adherents of the drive to end the embargo meanwhile announced the addition of 20 prominent Washingtonians to the cause. In behalf of the Washington Committee to Lift the Embargo, Brig. Gen. H. C. Newcomer, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis and the Rev. John W. Rustin declared in a joint statement:

"The maintenance of an embargo against the loyalist government of Spain constitutes a departure from the usual principle of intenational law in trade between friendly powers."

The United States could raise the embargo and not involve itself in foreign wars, Justice James H. Wolfe, of Salt Lake City, the last of 60 members of the lawyers committee to reach the Capital, declared in an interview.

Mgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, last night cited his acceptance of an invitation by Spanish Ambassador de Los Rios to visit loyalist Spain, in reply to a charge by Protestant ministers that the Ambassador's invitation to Catholic clergymen had been ignored.

German Press Opens Drive For Colonies

Backs Hitler's Demands; Nazis Also Speed Trade Program

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 31.—The Nazi press tonight inaugurated a campaign for German colonies as Reichsfuehrer Hitler studied Prime Minister Chamberlain's demands for deeds, not words, in favor of peace.

Taking its cue from the Fuehrer's Reichstag speech of Monday in which he demanded colonies, the newspaper Boersen-Zeitung said "our demands are so just and so long overdue that they do not admit a 'deal.'"

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said Chamberlain's speech had made a favorable impression, especially that part rebuking war-scare mongers.

Hitler's financial lieutenants started studying German export possibilities today while the Fuehrer himself sat back, well pleased with the world response to his Reichstag speech.

Prior to the appearance of Wednesday morning papers, the emphasis on exports seemed to trained observers to be an indication that Hitler's plans have not been perfected sufficiently to place the colonial issue in the foreground.

[Reports were current that Dr. Hjalmar H. G. Schacht, recently relieved of his duties as Reichsbank president, was being groomed for the job of reorganizing German foreign trade and leading the drive to find new markets, The Post's special correspondent said.—Editor's note.]

Continuation of conferences between Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, special negotiator on refugee problems, and members of the intergovernmental refugee committee.

A speech by one of Hitler's most trusted lieutenants, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, newly appointed consul general in San Francisco, who told the American Chamber of Commerce he was going to his new post with a three-fold task:

"To serve my Fuehrer and my people faithfully and decently, to observe the customs and laws of my guest country in fairness and loyalty, and to establish friendly connection between my homeland and my guest land."
